Odisha CM Lays Foundation For Bhubaneswar Metro Rail Project Phase-I

Bhubaneswar(KCN): A new era will begin in the transportation sector with a focus on safe travel in less time and at less cost as Odisha Chief Minister Naveen Patnaik today laid the foundation stone for the first phase of the Bhubaneswar Metro Rail Project.

While participating in a program organised in Barang's Ratagad, the Chief Minister said that today will be a special day in the history of development in the state with huge changes in the transportation sector. On this occasion, he said, "Today, I am fulfilling the promise I had given for the Metro Rail."

The Chief Minister said that LAccMI Yojana has brought transformation in the village, and the Metro Rail Project will take this transformation further by strengthening the relationship of the new capital Bhubaneswar with the former capital Cuttack. The Chief Minister said, "While coming here, I received the greetings of thousands of people on the road. Their happiness made me very happy too. May this happiness and joy of the New Year continue every day... This is my prayer to Mahaprabhu Jagannath. May the festival of development move forward with your support."

The Chief Minister said that this first phase of metro rail will be constructed from Bhubaneswar Airport to Trishulia. This 26-km-long project will have 20 stations and Rs 6255.94 crores will be spent on it.

The Chief Minister said that this is a flagship In Baran in a road show project of the state in the 5T initiative. Stating that the state government will bear the entire cost of the project, he said that this is the biggest investment in infrastructure in the history of Odisha. Before concluding he informed that directions have been given to prepare a master plan for the transmission of metro rail to Khurda, Puri and Cuttack. The Chief Minister called for the formation of a new Odisha.

Chief Minister Naveen Patnaik today reached the metro rail foundation laying event at Retagad In Baran in a road show from Bhubaneswar Airport after paying floral tributes at the statue of Legendary Biju Patnaik. He greeted the people present at various Chowks in the city at the roadshow and laid the foundation stone for the metro rail project. It is noteworthy that in April this year, the Chief Minister announced this metro rail project in Odisha. In October 2019, 5T Chairman Shri VK Pandian visited Trishulia and reviewed the progress of the preparation. This project was approved by the Odisha Cabinet on November 10th. Within just 4 months of getting the approval, the detailed project report was prepared and its foundation stones were laid today. This project will be implemented in a joint venture between Delhi Metro Rail Corporation and Bhubaneswar Metro Rail Corporation.

Attending the event, Minister for Social Security and Empowerment of Disabled Ashok Panda said that it was a long-awaited dream of the people of the state for a metro rail from Temple City Bhubaneswar to the former capital Cuttack. Today it has been fulfilled through this project. State Agriculture and Farmers Empowerment Minister Ranendra Pratap Swain said that this project launched by the Chief Minister today is going to create a special identity for Odisha. This project is a symbol of pride for the entire Odisha.

"Shortest Story Ever": Bhagwant Mann's Swipe At Congress On Day 1 Of 2024

Chandigarh(KCN): Aam Aadmi Party's Bhagwant Mann took a roundhouse punch at the Congress on New Year's Day, predicting the end of the party. "The shortest story a mother in Delhi or Punjab, can narrate to her child is 'Ek thi Congress (there was a Congress)'," the Punjab Chief Minister told reporters today.

Mr Mann's swipe is seen as a blow to the Opposition bloc that is prepping to start seat-sharing talks ahead of the Lok Sabha elections due later this year.

It is being read as the Aam Aadmi Party's unwillingness to share seats with the party in Delhi and Punjab, which together account for 21

Lok Sabha seats.

While the Congress has been thoroughly marginalised in both states, AAP's showing in the 2019 general elections had not been sterling.

Though the party won four of the 13 seats in Punjab, it ended up losing them to factionalism and party-hopping. Mr Mann was the last MP, who quit his seat to become the Punjab Chief Minister. Gurmail Singh, the AAP candidate who was fielded from his Sangrur seat, lost.

In Delhi, AAP lost all eight seats to the BJP. While the Opposition bloc INDIA is proceeding on the principle of one-on-one contest against the BJP, there is no consensus yet on what percentage of seats will be given to the Congress in states like Bengal, Delhi and Punjab, which are ruled by parties not known for their proximity to the Congress.

Last week, Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee had made it clear that the Trinamool Congress does not intend to share any of the state's 42 Lok Sabha seats with the Congress. "INDIA alliance will be there across the country. In Bengal, the Trinamool will fight and defeat the BJP. Remember, in Bengal, only Trinamool can teach a lesson to the BJP and not any other party," Ms Banerjee said.

"We have always said that Shiv Sena has always been fighting on 23 seats in the Lok Sabha elections including Dadra and Nagar Haveli and that will be firm," he had added.

Odisha's Quest for Equality: Tackling the Challenge of Dwindling Child Sex Ratio

Prasar Khuntia

In recent years, a Sample Registration System (SRS) survey has sounded an alarm about the declining sex ratio in India, particularly at birth. The figures, revealing a downward trajectory from 900 in 2013-15 to 896 in 2015-17, highlight a concerning trend that extends beyond mere statistics. This dip from 900 in 2013-15 reflects a complex interplay of societal, cultural, and economic factors affecting the gender distribution at the very onset of life. While India grapples with a declining sex ratio, the state of Kerala stands out with the highest sex ratio in the country—1,058 females for every 1000 males as per the 2011 census. The state's high literacy rate plays a pivotal role, fostering a society that values both genders equally and minimizing instances of female foeticide. The decline in the sex ratio is further exacerbated by the grim reality of a female foeticide and maternal mortality. Infant mortality rates, influenced by gender-based discrimination and inadequate maternal care during childbirth, contribute significantly to the alarming figures. Addressing these challenges is crucial for any meaningful improvement in the overall sex ratio. Despite the concerning current scenario, there is a glimmer of hope on the horizon. The Women and Men in India 2022 report anticipates an improvement in India's sex ratio to 952 by 2036, a significant leap from 943 in 2011. This alarming trend, reflecting an imbalance between male and female populations, has raised significant questions about societal norms, cultural biases, and the need for urgent interventions. Nowhere is this issue more pronounced than in the state of Odisha, where the sex ratio decline paints a stark picture of a demographic challenge. India, with its rich tapestry of cultures, traditions, and a deep-rooted patriarchal system, is witnessing a disconcerting decline in its sex ratio. According to census data, the national sex ratio stands at 943 females for every 1,000 males. While this ratio indicates progress from previous decades, the persistent gender gap remains a formidable challenge.

Odisha, a state known for its diverse landscapes and cultural heritage, finds itself at the forefront of the sex ratio crisis. Despite efforts to promote gender equality, the state's sex ratio is significantly lower than the national average. Societal factors, coupled with economic disparities and access to education, contribute to the skewed ratio, particularly in rural areas. In a disconcerting revelation, Odisha's child sex ratio has been on a persistent decline since 1961, painting a grim picture of gender imbalances that demand urgent attention. The trajectory, from 1,035 females per 1,000 males in 1961 to a staggering low of 941 in 2011, underscores a complex societal challenge that necessitates a comprehensive approach.

The historical data reveals a concerning narrative, showcasing a consistent decline in Odisha's child sex ratio. From 1,035 in 1961, the numbers have steadily dwindled, reaching 941 in 2011. This decades-long descent prompts an exploration into the causes and consequences of this disconcerting trend. The National Family Health Survey-5 (NFHS-5) report exposes a recent decline in Odisha's child sex ratio from 932 in 2015-2016 to a stark low of 894 in 2019-2021. The report highlights regional disparities, with educated and comparatively developed districts experiencing surprisingly lower sex ratios than tribal areas. Despite various initiatives by the state and central governments, the child sex ratio continues its downward spiral. The Pre-Conception and Pre-Natal Diagnostic Techniques (PC & PNDT) Act, designed to curb female foeticide, faces challenges in implementation. Experts emphasize the need for stringent measures and punitive actions against those involved in this heinous act. In response to the alarming decline, authorities in Odisha have initiated consultative workshops involving legal experts, health professionals, social scientists, and policymakers. The objective is to identify solutions, sharpen existing laws, and address the root causes of the skewed sex ratio. The involvement of the United National Population Fund (UNFPA) in these initiatives signals a collaborative effort to combat the crisis. Health officials attribute the declining sex ratio to deep-rooted cultural, social, and economic factors, including a preference for male children. The challenge goes beyond numbers, reflecting societal attitudes that necessitate a paradigm shift. Legal measures, education, awareness, and community engagement emerge as key strategies to alter mindsets and foster a positive change. Despite advancements in various sectors, Odisha's child sex ratio ranks sixth among states, showcasing the

DigiLocker is slowly but gradually changing developing India into a digitally enabled developed society

Currently, in India, almost all of the government issued documents are in physical form across the country. This means every time a resident needs to share the document with an agency to avail any service, an attested photo copy either in physical form or on scanned form is shared. Use of physical copies of document creates huge overhead in terms of manual verification, paper storage, manual audits, etc. incurring high cost and inconvenience. This creates problem for various agencies to verify the authenticity of these documents, thus, creating loopholes for usage of fake documents. Due to the nature of these documents not having a strong identity attached to it, anyone with same name can indeed misuse someone else's document. The Digital India program cleared by the cabinet in August 2014 seeks to 'prepare India for a knowledge future'. There are three key objectives; to create a digital infrastructure for online digital identity, mobile phone and a bank account, to service and govern a real-time online financial transaction platform, and to digitize all documents and records of the residents and make them available on a real-time basis. This vision of electronic resident document system is minimizing usage of physical documents (no scan/photocopies, no physical papers) via electronic formats and sharing across agencies; and eliminating usage of fake documents (no fake government / degree certificates, no fake usage of someone else's certificate) via a mechanism to verify "authenticity" of government issued documents online. This is also a step to provide a default "digital locker" for people to store and access Government issued documents in the Government cloud if they wish to subscribe. Such digital repository solution has eliminated need for the residents to maintain hard copy of government issued documents, eliminated need for the residents to produce (in hard format) government issued documents, while applying for services, provided secure, and consented access of government issued documents to user agencies, reduced administrative burden, service fulfillment time, and costs by enabling paperless transactions, ensured all the documents issued to the residents are available to him/her anywhere anytime, in a standard format which can be shared with any other department, provided an open, interoperable, multi-provider architecture to ensure departments and states have flexibility to use best document repository for their purposes, provided an architecture that can support well-structured future documents as well as a mechanism to digitize older documents that may not have machine readable formats, and also provided a default portal and mobile application for residents to view their documents in a consolidated way. To meet the key goals and the solution objectives, electronic documents architecture has ensured that all government issued "electronic documents" stored in digital repositories are machine readable eliminating human workflow for viewing and verifying the documents, they have a common set of "meta" attributes such as "issuer agency code", "document ID", "issue date", "Aadhaar number(s) of the individual(s) who the document is issued to", "expiry if any" along with domain specific sub data structure (e.g. school certificates will have different data elements compared to marriage/caste certificates), all electronic documents have a printable format "attached" to it allowing continued printing of certificates for individuals and for backward compatibility with existing paper based systems, can easily share the documents with other agencies/departments just by proving the unique document URI without having to share photocopies, scans, document uploads, etc., documents in electronic form are digitally signed by the issuing department/agency which allows any tampering to be detected electronically, most importantly, government documents and certificates issued can be verified online for "authenticity" (validating if the document shared by an individual indeed was issued by appropriate authority) eliminating the use of fake documents/certificates. In addition, Aadhaar attached documents/certificates ensure ONLY the owner Aadhaar holder can indeed use the certificate, thus eliminating misuse of someone else's certificates, documents in the repositories are secure in terms of storage and access. In addition, specific documents (based on type of document) may only be shareable via owner authentication to ensure sharing and access is "authorized" by the document owner. DigiLocker offers a standardized mechanism to issue government documents to Aadhaar holders in electronic and printable formats, store them, and make it shareable with various agencies. This allows government issued documents to be moved to electronic form and make it available for real-time access in a set of "digital repositories". This solution also offers multiple digital locker providers and access gateways to co-exist to enable healthy ecosystem play. Usage of Aadhaar ensures that document owner is strongly authenticable eliminating document frauds. In addition to supporting new documents to be made electronic and online accessible, this solution also offers a way to digitize older documents. It also offers a mechanism by which "digital lockers" can be offered by service providers and suggestion to provide "a default digital locker" portal and mobile application to residents to view a consolidated list of documents using their Aadhaar number. It is highly recommended that government issued resident documents have Aadhaar number(s) of the people. When digital documents/certificates are not attached to Aadhaar, it is important to note that, while those documents can be still made available online in electronic format, it can potentially be misused by another person who has same name/gender etc. It is impossible to verify if the certificate/document was issued to same individual without affixing a "real identity" using Aadhaar number. Hence it is important to mandate use of Aadhaar number in all resident documents to strongly "assert" ownership. As far as the achievements are concerned, DigiLocker NAD has so far onboarded more than 870 Academic Institutions with 3+ crore awards, Indian Navy is issuing all Training Certificates on DigiLocker, HealthLocker service is in the works, DoPPW is giving PPO via DigiLocker to central government pensioners, EPFO Passbook has been distributed using DigiLocker, NSDA/NCVET is providing all Skill Certifications (MoU signed with NSDA), many NBFCs and FinTechs have adopted DigiLocker for their services, 35 Insurance firms have issued more than 51 Cr documents using DigiLocker, DBT Mission has also adopted DigiLocker to promote Citizen-Centric service delivery.

IS DEMOCRACY SQUEEZED BETWEEN RELIGION AND POLITICS?

M.R.LALU

Two significant events in 2024 would go into the annals of history. Understandably, their impact is going to be long lasting. We will witness them generate a cultural churn and would also see them alter into a political storm. Both are deeply interconnected. It is predicted that the rightwing conservative Hindutva forces in politics will hugely benefit from their impact. What are these events and why would they become defining moments in 2024? The present political scenario in India is ripe and intense for its nationalistic upsurge which is an obvious outcome of meaningfully woven narratives and initiatives manifested in an ideological setting named 'Nation First and Party Next'. This ideological articulation was absent in Indian politics for decades. This has helped the present government at the centre for creating a distinctive image of nationalistic identity. Evidently, the clout of the government led by Narendra Modi has pushed him through an unprecedentedly growing popularity, which has gone beyond the boundaries of the country and gained international accolades. His ascent for the third time will have a pronounced meaning and impact on his global popularity. Modi's frequent prediction about his hat-trick comeback would be seen as a massive strategy kicked off with the omnipotent support of the beneficiaries of the schemes that he launched. But the two events I earnestly indicated in the beginning would become remarkably instrumental in the Modi rise in its third term. First is the Ram Temple which is going to throw its golden doors open for the public in January in Ayodhya and the second is the year long centenary festivities of the RSS to commemorate its wrapping up of a century. Ever since its inception, the BJP gained consistent support from the RSS and the saffron outfit with its century long initiatives has had golden moments of success to brighten its cultural identity. Both these events are equally important for the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP). Its prospects depend on, though not totally, on the impact of the activities that the RSS takes up on the ground and the temple in Ayodhya is deeply connected with its existence and its inauguration a reason for elation. It is not only inaccurate but also immature to make predictions on anything in advance. But for the opposition of Modi, the ferocity of their attacks on the Prime Minister doesn't turn you clueless about their desperation. A visible downsizing of the meaning of their existence is apparently active and their relentlessly inaccurate involvement in badmouthing the man of the moment has dwarfed their political eminence further. Now what happens in disgust and disappointment is mere shadowboxing. The dilemma of the Congress and some of the parties in the INDIA block would alarmingly intensify their heartbeat. This is mostly due to their historic stand on the temple movement which was totally pessimistic and their ill-conceived notions on the existence of Lord Ram. Whatever, they seem to have failed to pass a justifiable reason behind their negation. The after-effect of the temple inauguration would help the Modi government to increase its power and also to personally magnify Modi's spiritual persona. The government's decision to invite leaders from various political parties deserves appreciation. This indeed, is a calculative move from a trickster's perspective. The move probably would help the BJP to expose the parties that remained fortune-sellers of the religious minorities making minority appeasement their familial enterprise. The BJP and its leaders would come out hammer and tongs to publicly expose the list of parties that turned their faces away in denial to the goodwill gesture of the ruling regime for the temple inauguration. Ram Madhav, an RSS veteran brings a remarkable perspective to what the social reach of the RSS should mean to Indians. The organization will have completed its activities for a century by 2025 and it would certainly set its agenda for an ideological overhaul. Though criticisms are showered on it frequently, its efforts to reframe its Hindutva narratives with critical ideological changes were evident. Look at the statement of RSS Chief Mohan Bhagwat. Probably opposite to its early stand, Bhagwat brought out the vision of oneness that he thinks would only fructify with the religious minorities, especially the Muslims being taken to the fold. This has been the change, says Ram Madhav which was both intellectual and complex. When Bhagwat says "No Hindu Rashtra without Muslims", what he literally indicates is a compulsion, a necessary accommodation of the minority feelings that its political affiliate the BJP would require to keep for its sustainable winning spree. And for the RSS, it is sure to gain a remodeled reputation, consciously diluting its notorious envy for the Muslim minority, a permanent stance it is accused of. Stretching its hands further the organization is understood to have taken up outreach activities to further fill the electoral casket of the BJP and bring its man back to the throne for a third consecutive term. But it is doubtful if this cultural shift in the ideological framework of the RSS would help the BJP to inflate its fortunes. This is because the RSS traditionally believed that it is an organization which is meant to unite the Hindus and the Hindus alone. But the Bhagwat philosophy turns its traditional view down. If his words are to be believed, all those who are born in India are Hindus. Perplexity holds you tighter as you fail to comprehend this ideological hotchpotch. The RSS is appreciative of a culturally inclusive scenario in India viewing all religious factions being consolidated under one Hindu umbrella. Ultimately, it needs various religions to assemble for a single nationalist cause. But its fight against the conversion menace and various forms of Jihad gains it a ruthless enemy status among the minority congregation. As the date of the inauguration is drawing closer, the CPI (M) has formally declined the government's invitation to the event citing its strict disagreement on the BJP's strategy of mixing politics with religion. The Congress is undecided and its response is awaited. But it has a solid reason to not to damage its already broken prestige further. It is known for its diminished self-respect and lost credibility and taking the Marxist line on the temple inauguration would again deteriorate its prospects in the Hindi heartlands. The blemish on its questioning the relevance and existence of Lord Ram had gone deeper, doing irreversible damage to the party. Historically Nehru's stand on the Hindu cause was not different. The resurrection of Somnath temple had not only dragged the problem from gaining a solution for long but also consistently dampened down the patience of multiple generations of believers that venerated Lord Ram in essence and ethics. Presumably, the year 2024 would be the year of prospects for the BJP and perils for its opposition.

Sir

It was a surprise as well as delightful to watch Billionaire real estate magnate Niranjan Hiranandani, entrepreneur and co-founder and managing director of the Hiranandani Group travelling by Mumbai local train, ditching his luxurious fleet of cars, for a trip to Ulhasanagar. The unique experience shared by him turned viral with the public appreciating his gesture as it goes to show that public transport systems are truly time efficient, safe and helps one from traffic congestions that bring life and business to a standstill in our cities. Rather than private vehicles using public transport systems definitely helps reduce heavy traffic congestions, reduces pollution and also makes one socially aware and encourages responsibility towards the society.

India Asks Pak To Release 184 Fishermen Who Have Completed Jail Term

New Delhi(KCN): India on Monday asked Pakistan to expedite the release and repatriation of 184 Indian fishermen in view of completion of their jail term. In addition, Islamabad has also been asked to provide immediate consular access to 12 civilian prisoners in Pakistan's custody, who are believed to be Indian, the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) said.

India made the request in the context of the exchange of lists of civilian prisoners and fishermen by both the countries as part of a practice to do so on January 1 and July 1 every calendar year under the framework of a 2008 pact.

India has shared lists of 337 civilian prisoners and 81 fishermen in its custody, who are Pakistani or are believed to be Pakistani.

Similarly, Pakistan has shared lists of 47 civilian prisoners and 184 fishermen in its custody, who are Indian or are believed to be Indian, according to the MEA.

"The government of India has called for early release and repatriation of civilian prisoners, missing Indian defence personnel, and fishermen along with their boats, from Pakistan's custody," it said.

"In this context, India has urged Pakistan to expedite necessary action at its end to confirm the nationality status of 65 believed-to-be Pakistani prisoners, including fishermen, whose repatriation is pending for want of nationality confirmation from Pakistan," it said.

"In addition, Pakistan has been asked to provide immediate consular access to the remaining 12 civilian prisoners in Pakistan's custody, who are believed to be Indian," it said.

The MEA said Pakistan has been requested to ensure the safety, security and welfare of all Indian and believed-to-be Indian civilian prisoners and fishermen, pending their release and repatriation to

This includes 478 Indian fishermen and nine Indian civilian prisoners who were repatriated from Pakistan in 2023, it said.

Ayodhya Case Judges Decided To Have 'Judgment Of The Court': Chief Justice

New Delhi(KCN): More than four years after the historic Ayodhya verdict of the Supreme Court, Chief Justice of India DY Chandrachud on Monday said the five-judges, who ruled in favour of construction of a Ram temple by a trust at the disputed site, had unanimously decided there will be no authorship ascribed to the judgment.

On November 9, 2019, settling a fractious issue that went back more than a century, a five-judge bench headed by the then CJI Ranjan Gogoi had paved the way for construction of the temple and ruled that an alternative five-acre plot will be found for a mosque in the holy town in Uttar Pradesh.

In an exclusive interview with PTI, CJI Chandrachud, who was part of the constitution bench, candidly spoke on the issue of anonymity and said, when the judges sat together, as they do before a pronouncement, it was unanimously decided that this will be a "judgment of the court".

He was replying to the query as to why the name of the author judge was not made public.

"When the five-judge bench sat to deliberate on the judgment as we all do before a judgment is pronounced, we all decided unanimously that this will be a judgment of the court. And, therefore, there was no authorship ascribed to any individual judge," the CJI said. "The case has a long history of conflict, of diverse viewpoints based on the history of the nation and all those who were part of the bench decided that this will be a judgment of the court. The court will speak through one voice and the idea of doing so was to send a clear message that all of us stood together not only in the ultimate outcome but in the reasons indicated in the judgment," he said, adding "I will close my answer with that."

Delivering a unanimous verdict on the case that long polarised the country and frayed the secular tapestry of Indian society, the Supreme Court bench had said in 2019 that the faith of Hindus that Lord Ram was born at the site was undisputed, and he was symbolically the owner of the land.

Yet, it is also clear that the destruction of the 16th century three-domed structure by Hindu kar sevaks, who want to build a Ram temple there, was a wrong that "must be remedied," the court had said. It said it is not concerned with faith and belief and instead treated the case as a title dispute over land between three parties -- the Sunni Muslim Waqf Board, the Nirmohi Akhara, a Hindu group, and the symbolic Lord Rama designated as Ram Lalla Virajman (the deity).

The judgment, running into 1,045 pages, was widely welcomed by Hindu politicians and groups, while the Muslim leadership said they will accept the verdict, even though they described it as flawed. Still, they called for peace and calm, and leaders across the political spectrum had noted that it was now time to move on.

Illegal fishing endangering turtles at Gahirmatha

Kendrapara(KCN): The future does not appear encouraging for rare Olive Ridley turtles as fishermen and trawlers continue to intrude into the prohibited zone of Gahirmatha marine sanctuary at Bhitarkanika National Park in Kendrapara district. This is happening on a daily basis despite a ban on fishing in the area, sources said Sunday. The Forest Department has imposed a fishing ban in the Gahirmatha marine sanctuary and declared it a prohibited zone from November 2023 to May 2024. However, the restriction appears to be only in name as rules are flouted with impunity. Locals pointed out that other than announcing the ban, no measures have been taken by the Forest Department to implement it properly. Sources also pointed out that the number of arrests proves how slack the Forest Department is. A total of 175 fishermen have been arrested and 22 fishing trawlers have been seized in the last two months. Most of the fishermen are from neighbouring Balasore and Bhadrak districts. However, the number of fishermen who continue to tread in the banned sanctuary far exceeds the number who have been arrested. Meanwhile, some of the fishermen alleged that the Forest Department is adopting repressive measures. They said that many fishermen with their trawlers inside the prohibited zone are being let off.

On the other hand, fishermen working outside the prohibited zone are being penalised. Locals alleged that some unscrupulous Forest Department personnel are working in tandem with fishermen from other districts. They said that Forest staff are cracking down on local fishermen and arresting them even if they are fishing outside the prohibited zone. Observers pointed out that the entry of fishing trawlers in the prohibited zone will result in a decline in breeding of the rare turtles. Environmentalists have also expressed concern over the development. They said that fishing in the prohibited zone will lead to loss of lives of the rare turtles. The Gahirmatha marine sanctuary adjoining Bhitarkanika under Rajnagar block is spread over 1,435 square kilometres. The marine sanctuary is known as the nursery of the Olive Ridley turtles as they visit the area in large numbers to lay eggs every year. Usually, the turtles start arriving in the sanctuary from November onwards and leave in May. It is the main reason why Gahirmatha is declared as a prohibited zone for this period. When contacted, ranger Pradosh Moharana rejected the charges. He warned that stringent action will be taken against any fishermen or trawlers found in the prohibited zone.

Two Odisha youths set out for Ayodhya on foot

Berhampur(KCN): Two youths from Odisha have embarked on a journey to Uttar Pradesh's Ayodhya on foot to offer prayers at the Ram temple. However, they are likely to miss the inauguration of the temple scheduled January 22 as they may take over 40 days to cover the over 1,400-km distance from Berhampur town in Odisha's Ganjam district. Before starting their journey Sunday, two 22-year-old friends Kuresh Behera and Sonu Bisoi, residents of Chandrapur and Kanishi areas respectively, offered prayers at the Ram temple in Kanishi near Berhampur town. With bags on their back and flags in their hands, the duo set out for Ayodhya amid chants of 'Jai Shri Ram' by locals gathered at the temple. Some people also accompanied them for the next 10-15 km. Behera said they have received heartening moments of solidarity, with several people, including women, greeting them with 'Jai Shri Ram' on the first day of their journey. "We have set a target to walk for 30-35 km every day in order to reach Ayodhya in the next 40 days. We will miss the inaugural function of the temple but we will offer prayers later," Behera said. "We want to have a glimpse of Ram Lala seated in the temple in Ayodhya. We have sought the blessings of Lord Ram at my village before setting out on our journey," Bisoi said.

Both Behera and Bisoi work in private companies. They have planned to stay at roadside temples at night and also spread awareness among people on the need to take the spiritual path.

Odisha: Elephant herd holds up traffic

Thakurmunda(KCN): Tourists who had come to Bhimkund in Mayurbhanj district for an outing Sunday had a harrowing experience while returning in the evening as a herd of 22 elephants blocked the main road. The herd stayed put on the road for more than hour creating panic among the tourists. A large number of vehicles were seen standing on both the up and down sides of the road as the elephants held centre stage. Forest department officials said the elephant herd had crossed the Tel river

Saturday night and entered Andharikhaman village located in the Thakurmunda range. When villagers and Forest staff tried to drive the herd away, the animals came on to the Bhimkund-Boring road and stationed themselves.

Emotional Warner braces for a perfect farewell

New Delhi: David Warner doesn't let his guard down in public too often when it comes to being emotional. Two days out from the start of his farewell Test, he got emotional on two occasions. And he didn't hold back on either occasion. Both times, it had to do with an opening partner who he's had an association with since his very early days in cricket. One who he will walk out with at the SCG in his final foray donning a Baggy Green over the next week. The other whose plaque he'll walk past after having lost him in tragic fashion nine years ago but still sees "at the other end". And Warner spoke about still finding it difficult to talk about the passing of the late Phillip Hughes all these years later but admitted that among the long series of those who he's had to open the batting with, his fellow left-hander from country New South Wales would arguably have been the best.

"For us, being here when he fell that day was quite sad and terrible. Still today, it hits us hard. I've always seen him at the other end. All the boys know he's looking down upon us. Still hard to talk about it today because I think he was going to be one of our greatest opening batters ever," said Warner.

"He had every shot in the book. His character, his energy and his smile lit up the room. Best mates with everyone, no one would ever say a bad word about him and truly, truly believe today, if he was still with us, he'd be in my position or Uzzie's position (at the top of the order)."

Warner had opened the batting in his maiden Test alongside the late Hughes, who had made his debut a couple of years earlier, a dozen Tests ago. And he'll be doing so in the company of Khawaja in his final Test, the 112th of his career, in Sydney. When asked about what it meant to him to be able to do so after all these years of having known each other is when Warner first showed signs of the emotional week that lies ahead of him, referring to it as a "fairytale ending".

"I was saying to Uzzie this morning when we were out in the middle, with his debut Test, I was actually sitting up in one of the boxes up there and it was awesome to see and it is a fairytale ending. I don't know how many cricketers who have gone through junior cricket with each other and played the highest level for a long period of time," Warner said.

"Just to see him come back the way he has the last two years has been absolutely amazing. I know his family are really, really proud of him. I'm really, really proud of him as a mate. And it brought a tear to my eye when he scored that hundred when he first came back (against England at the SCG in January 2021). But yeah, I think when you're childhood friends and you get to go out here at the SCG as kids, dreaming big, it's a great fitting. I love him, hey." In a rather sweet moment, Warner walked into the press-conference room alongside his wife Candice and his three kids. They sat through most of his chat before the youngest needed a break. They'll be in full strength during the week, however, as he walks away from Test cricket for good. And having expressed his desire to call it quits in front of his family and friends on his home-ground some seven months ago, Warner revealed that he had considered leaving earlier as well but had no doubts over where he wanted to go out.

"I said (that) quite clearly in England before the World Test Championship (final). There was a lot of talk about me and my form. I wanted to nip it in the bud early. I said my ideal preference to finish would be Sydney - that's ideal, that's fantastic. But I actually had Lord's pencilled in as my last Test, especially if I didn't go as well as I did as a partnership with Uzzie at the top of the order. Then from there, it just followed on that we played some good innings together. I didn't have that hundred (in England) that I always wanted but eluded me in achieving. But as a team and as a whole we did our bit, so to get this ending is awesome, but it's not about me it's about us. We've won the series, but to win three nil and have a whitewash here at the SCG would be a great thing for the team. We can't take away the fact of how well this team has been in the last 18 months," he said.

Warner did admit to how the emotion of bidding farewell to something he's cherished for so long and has taken so much pride in was beginning to get to him as he's neared the finish. "It has actually become more emotional. When I looked at Lord's (2nd Test of last year's Ashes) as a potential finish, I didn't really have many emotions because I was content. I might not have been scoring runs, but I still had the desire to play Test cricket. I love the game of cricket. It doesn't matter what format I'm playing. But definitely it's been emotional since Perth, since I've been back in Australia and knowing that I'm playing (my final Test). Getting that 160, putting us into a great position for the team, it hit home when people in the streets were coming up and saying, 'well done, we support you, we back you'. It really means a lot," he said.

Hathurasingha endorses Najmul Hossain Shanto for long-term captaincy

Dhaka: Bangladesh head coach Chandika Hathurasingha said on Sunday that stand-in skipper Najmul Hossain had given enough evidence to take up the leadership role on a long-term basis. Under his captaincy, Bangladesh earned their maiden ODI and T20I wins against New Zealand away from home. Before arriving for this white-ball tour, Shanto also displayed Test captaincy prowess as his team beat New Zealand back home in Sylhet.

With Shakib Al Hasan's long-term availability in question, BCB are likely to look for a permanent option at the helm. In that regard, Shanto appears to have seized the opportunity that has come his way. "I think they (BCB) will strongly think about that (long term captaincy). Of course it's a board decision and Shanto has shown enough evidence for them to take him seriously," Hathurasingha said after the last T20I at Mount Maunganui on Sunday. Hathurasingha also talked up the positive attitude and environment in the Bangladesh dressing room under Shanto.

"I think the attitude of the players... this young group had no fear and want to compete in the middle. The other thing I thought - leadership of Shanto was outstanding. He was tactically spot on and very clear with the messages to the players and what he expects from them," he added.

"I think the environment in the dressing room is much better because the communication is very clear, as I said, from Shanto. And they know they are good enough players to compete and I think that's why there is no fear in the players' mind," he added. Hathurasingha said that he was impressed with the way Shoriful Islam made a mark across formats in the recent past, while adding that leg spinner Rishad Hossain had shown potential in white-ball cricket. With no Taskin Ahmed and Ebadot Hossain, the onus was on Shoriful to lead the pace bowling attack and he managed to deliver throughout the series. "He (Shoriful) has been outstanding for us in all three formats recently. Eight months ago he was not in the team, he was not playing any formats, and now he is leading bowler for us so very impressive. Another positive is I think Rishad. We were craving for a leg spinner," he added," Hathurasingha said.

New Delhi: Led by brisk half-centuries from Daniel Lawrence, Beau Webster and Marcus Stoinis, Melbourne Stars cruised to a seven-wicket win in a high-scoring encounter against Adelaide Strikers at the Adelaide Oval.
