

Rath Yatra: Chariots reach Puri's Gundicha temple

Puri(KCN): The chariots of the sibling deities, Lord Jagannath, Lord Balabhadra and Devi Subhadra, reached the Gundicha temple Monday, with which the first leg of the Rath Yatra celebrations in Odisha's Puri concluded. Thousands of people pulled the chariots, while lakhs of devotees gathered on the roadside to watch the procession on 'Badadanda' (Grand Road) amid heat and humidity.

The 'yatra' began Sunday evening, but halted a few metres later due to sunset. It resumed the 2.5 km journey from the 12th-century shrine to the Gundicha temple around 9.30am Monday and concluded at 2.35pm. The three majestic chariots will remain outside the Gundicha temple on Grand Road. The deities will be taken inside the temple Tuesday in a ceremonial procession. The deities will remain at this temple for a week.

"The chariots have reached their destination. We have put cordon around the three chariots and are regulating the crowd. Adequate traffic arrangements have been made for smooth flow of vehicles," said DGP Arun Sarangi, who also participated in pulling the chariots. Rath Yatra is a two-day affair this time, after 53 years, due to celestial arrangements.

In a departure from tradition, some of the rituals, including 'Nabajouban Darshan' and 'Netra Utsav', were held Sunday. These rituals are generally held ahead of the Rath Yatra. 'Nabajouban Darshan' means the youthful appearance of deities, who were behind the doors for 15 days in a ritual called 'Anasara' (quarantine), held after 'Snana Purnima'. According to mythology, the deities fall ill due to excessive bathing on 'Snana Purnima' and therefore remain indoors. Prior to 'Nabajouban Darshan', the priests performed a special ritual called 'Netra Utsav' in which the eyeballs of the deities are painted afresh. Tight security arrangements have been put in place with the deployment of 180 platoons (one platoon comprises 30 personnel) of security personnel, Superintendent of Police Pinak Mishra said. Artificial intelligence-based CCTV cameras have been installed at 'Badadanda', the venue of the festival, and other strategic locations in the pilgrim town, police said.

Two dead, over 130 injured during Rath Yatra in Odisha

Puri(KCN): At least two persons died and over 130 were injured in two different incidents during Lord Jagannath's Rath Yatra in Odisha, officials said Monday. A resident of Bolangir district died allegedly due to suffocation in a stampede-like situation Sunday during the Rath Yatra in Puri, a health official said.

"When we put him in the ambulance, his pulse was running. We took him to the hospital and gave him CPR. However, doctors declared him brought dead," said Sushant Kumar Patnaik, assistant commandant of St John Ambulance Service. According to sources, the devotee fainted on Grand Road while pulling the chariot of Lord Balabhadra. He was immediately rushed to the Puri District Headquarters Hospital, where the doctor declared him brought dead. Expressing grief over his death, Odisha Chief Minister Mohan Charan Majhi announced ex gratia of Rs 4 lakh for the next of kin of the deceased. He also instructed officials concerned to ensure the best available medical care for the injured devotees. In another incident, a devotee allegedly died after coming under the wheels of a chariot during Rath Yatra in Jharsuguda district Sunday, police said. The mishap occurred during the pulling of the chariot of Jagannath temple at Kukujangha village in the district. The deceased has been identified as Shyam Sundar Kishan (45). While pulling the chariot, he accidentally fell down and the wheels of the chariot ran over him. He was immediately rushed to the district headquarters hospital, where he died while undergoing treatment.

More than 130, including a few police personnel, were also injured during the Rath Yatra in Puri, a health officer of Puri district said. Half of the injured persons have been discharged after treatment on the same day while at least 40 persons are undergoing treatment, he said. More than 600 people have visited hospitals and medical camps in Puri. However, only over 130 have been admitted to hospital, said Director of Health Services, Bijay Mohapatra. "Such admission in hospital during Rath Yatra is normal. None of the injured are in very serious condition. We are providing treatment to the injured devotees," he said. After visiting the hospital Sunday night, Revenue Minister Suresh Pujari said, "One person died while many others were admitted after sustaining injuries in stampede, dehydration, dysentery and other reasons. No one is serious." As hot and humid weather was prevailing in Puri Sunday, many people suffered in the hot weather conditions also, he said. This year, the Rath Yatra in Puri is being celebrated for two days after 53 years due to some celestial arrangements.

RESIDENT OF INDIA INAUGURATES DIVINE RETREAT CENTRE OF BRAHMA KUMARIS AT HARIDAMADA VILLAGE NEAR BHUBANESWAR AND LAUNCHES NATIONAL CAMPAIGN 'LIFESTYLE FOR SUSTAINABILITY'

Bhubaneswar(KCN): The President of India, Smt Droupadi Murmu inaugurated the Divine Retreat Centre of Brahma Kumaris at Haridamada village near Bhubaneswar, Odisha today (July 8, 2024). She also launched a national campaign 'Lifestyle for Sustainability' of Brahma Kumaris.

Speaking on the occasion, the President said that Mother Nature is full of bounties. Forests, mountains, rivers, lakes, seas, rain, air - all are essential for the survival of living beings. But humans should remember that abundance in nature is for their needs, not for their greed. Human beings are exploiting nature for their indulgence and by doing this, are becoming victims of nature's wrath. She stated that establishing harmony with nature and living nature-friendly life is the need of the hour.

The President said that Indian culture has always emphasized a lifestyle compatible with nature. In our philosophy, the earth has been called mother and the sky has been called father. The river has also been given the title of mother. Water has been called life. We worship rain as Lord

Indra and the ocean as Lord Varuna. In our stories, mountains and trees move and animals even talk to each other. This means that nature is not inert, it also has the power of consciousness within it. All these are beautiful thoughts of Indian philosophers for the protection of nature. The President said that climate change, global warming, and uncertainty of weather are big challenges that the world facing today. Natural disasters like floods, landslides, avalanches, earthquakes, forest fires, and tsunamis are no longer occasional. Now these have become frequent incidents. The President said that small changes in our daily lives pave the way for big changes in society. We have to change our habits to ensure minimum use of natural resources. Often, drinking water gets wasted due to the taps being left open. Lights remain on even during the day. Similarly, be it at home or office, we do not pay attention to switching off the fans or lights. We have not been able to free ourselves from the habit of leaving some food on plates. She emphasised that it is not enough to just discuss nature-friendly lifestyle, we have to make it a part of our daily life. She urged everyone to make a habit of saving natural resources to conserve it. The President appreciated all associated with the national campaign 'Lifestyle for Sustainability'. She said that it is a praiseworthy step in the direction of connecting people with nature. She stated that this campaign should not be limited to meetings, committees, or conferences. She urged all associated with the campaign to go to different parts of the country and make people aware, especially, the rural people about the environment.

Mahaprabhu Lord Jagannath

temple. When Lord Jagannath himself did not move when Bhakta Salabega asked him to wait...not sure who are we to decide!!! But, during Rath yatra every one is allowed see the Lord.

William Bruton, the first English traveler to visit Puri and to see the Jagannath temple, made a certain counter-factual observation in 1633 that the image of Jagannatha "is in shape like a serpent, with seven heads" and the holy pagoda is "the mirror of all wickedness and idolatry". Thus, Jagannath became known to Europeans as a pagan divinity of monstrous form. To the Europeans, the iconography of Jagannatha remained a mystery from the time of Bruton's visit until the 19th century. Bernier visited Puri in 1667 and left the first reliable description of the Car Festival, but failed to give any account of the image.

Jean-Baptiste Tavernier later described in detail the priceless jewellery of Jagannatha, which however, he never saw.

With the more enlightened views of the 19th century, the problem of the iconography of Jagannath became a fascinating field for speculation. After the British occupation of Odisha in 1803, the temple and its priests received special treatment from the East India Company, which decided to protect the institution for economic and political reasons. Europeans were still excluded from the great sanctuary and even General Alexander Cunningham, one of the doyens of Indian archaeology, had a rather vague knowledge of the appearance of the Puri images, chiefly based, it seems, on secondary sources.

The restrictions imposed on non-Hindus did not prevent a number of scholars from observing the strange rites at Puri, which included the suspension of caste-rules during the Car Festival, nor from drawing conclusions concerning the origins of the cult of Jagannath.

Legendary account as found in the Skanda-Purana, Brahma Purana and other Puranas and later Odia works state that Lord Jagannath was originally worshipped as Lord Neela Madhav by a Savar king named Viswavasu. Having heard about the deity, King Indradymuna sent a Brahmin priest, Vidyapati to locate the deity, who was worshipped secretly in a dense forest by Viswavasu. Vidyapati tried his best but could not locate the place. But at last he managed to marry Viswavasu's daughter Lalita. At repeated request of Vidyapati, Viswavasu took his son-in-law blindfolded to a cave where Lord Neela Madhav was worshipped. Vidyapati was very intelligent. He dropped mustard seeds on the ground on the way. The seeds germinated after a few days, which enabled him to find out the cave later on. On hearing from him, King Indradymuna proceeded immediately to Odisha on a pilgrimage to see and worship the deity. But the deity had disappeared. The king was disappointed. The king was determined not to return without having a darshan of the deity and observed fast unto death at Mount Neela. Afterwards the king built a magnificent temple for Vishnu. Sri Narasimha Murti brought by Narada was installed in the temple. During sleep, the king had a vision of Lord Jagannath. Also an astral voice directed him to receive the fragrant tree on the seashore and make idols out of it. Accordingly the king got the image of Lord Jagannath, Balabhadra, Subhadra and Chakra Sudarshan made out of the wood of the divine tree and installed them in the temple.

The word Jagannath can be split to two words Jagat(Universe) and Natha(Lord). So the meaning is Lord of the Universe. It is believed that the remains from Lord Krishna's cremations is placed in idol of Lord Jagannath. Hence Jagannath is worshiped with Balabhadra and Subhadra. As Jagannath is the Lord of Universe, any living/non-living thing is part of Janmath Sanskruti. Any one. Unfortunately, these days we have created restrictions that only Hindus can enter the

Jagannath Cult and its Linkage with Tribal Culture

Prof. Dr. Umesh Chandra Patra

The origin and antiquity of Lord Purusottama-Jagannath, the Lord of the universe, are shrouded in considerable to know how and when the God came to be worshipped at Puri and became one of the prominent deities of Hindu pantheon. It is also difficult to know whether the God was originally an Aryan deity or a tribal deity later on Aryanised due to the mingling of the Aryan and non-Aryan cultures.

According to the tradition recorded in the "Utkal Khanda" of the Skanda Purana, Indradymuna, the ruler of Avanti in the Satya Yuga and a great votary of Lord Visnu, sent Vidyapati, the brother of his family priests, to Odradesa to locate the exact place where Lord Nila had a was worshipped secretly.

Coming to Odradesa Vidyapati took shelter in a Sabara village, very near to the Blue-Mountain. Winning over the friendship of the Sabara chief Visvavasu and marrying his daughter Lalita, Vidyapati was able to see Lord Nilamadhaba.

After tracing the route to the shrine of Nilamadhaba Vidyapati went back to Avanti to inform his sovereign Lord Indradymuna the whereabouts of Nilamadhaba. The King, accompanied by Narada, set-out for Odradesa to pay homage to the Lord. But at the border of the country he came to know about the miraculous disappearance of the Lord. He became extremely sad. Narada consoled him saying that the Lord would appear in the form of a Daru. A few days after, Lord Nila a d h a v a Himself appeared in a dream to Indradymuna. The next day the king and his attendants brought the "Daru" from the seashore and placed it on the Mahavedi with respect.

As directed by the Lord in the dream, Indradymuna ordered for fashioning beautiful images out of the sacred "Daru". But strangely no carpenter was available. At last Visvakarma, the Divine Builder appeared in the guise of an old carpenter and agreed to build the images on the condition that he be allowed to remain undisturbed inside the temple for twenty one days. As days passed on the sound of the carpenter's tools became thinner and thinner and when no sound was heard, queen Gundicha became impatient and curious.

On her insistence, when the doors of the temple were opened no carpenter was found inside and the images of Jagannatha, Balabhadra and Subhadra were found incomplete.

The Hindu devotee believes that Lord Jagannath is eternal. Thus, we have two versions of the origins. One is the popular legends based on Puranas and Folklore. The other is the statements of the scholars who have tried to collate evidences from known history, archaeology and ancient literature to drag surmises about the history and the origins. The legends regarding the origin of Jagannath, which have been recorded in various sources such as Mahabharat of Sarala Das, Deula Tola of Nilambar Das, Skanda Purana, Brahma Purana, Narada Purana, Padma Purana, Kapila Samhita etc., suggest the tribal as well as Brahmanical links of the deity in the initial stage. According to Sarala Das's Mahabharat, the deadbody of Lord Krishna, transformed into wooden form, landed at the Puri seashore; Jara Sabara, an aborigine, picked it up and worshipped it; subsequently, Indradymuna, the king of Somavamsa, got three wooden images made out of the log and built a temple for the deities. According to Deula Tola, Indradymuna, the king of Malava, got piece of sacred wood which was the metamorphosed shape of God Nilamadhaba from the Sabara chief, named Visvavasu, and out of the wood he carved three images.

Regarding tribal origin of Lord Jagannath, it is said that Nilamadhaba was worshipped by Savara King Visvavasu inside the dense forest of Nilagiri. Subsequently Nilamadhaba disappeared and reincarnated in the forms of three deities Lord Jagannath, Subhadra and Balabhadra. These three deities together symbolize Nilamadhaba. Nila represents Lord Jagannath, Ma represents Goddess Subhadra and Dhaba which represents Balabhadra who are worshipped at Puri. The Savaras became known as Daitas who are the hereditary servitors of Lord Jagannath. They observed the funeral rites of Lord Jagannath during Navakalevara. The worship of Lord Jagannath by Savara is also mentioned in Darubrahma Gita written today the Sauras or Savaras worship trees "the Nature God" known as "Kitung" which means God. They do not cut trees because they believe that Kitung dwells inside the tree. Kitung is otherwise known as Jagant and according to them Jagant is the 10th incarnation of Vishnu. As it is said the word Jagannath is not a Sanskrit word nor it is a Pali word but a derivation of Austric word Jagant.

Lord Jagannath, Jay Jagannath

Nirupama Bhuyan

Jagannath is a Sanskrit name used to describe a deity form of Krishna. The term means master (nath) of the universe (jagat). Jagannath is considered amongst Vaishnavas to be a very merciful form of Krishna. The oldest deity, but the carpenter insisted that he not be disturbed while he was carving the deity. The king waited anxiously outside his room, but after some time, all sound stopped. The impatient Indradymuna worried what had happened and assuming the worst, opened the doors – only to find the deity half-finished and the carpenter gone! The mysterious carpenter was none other than Vishvakarma, the heavenly architect. The king was distraught as much they loved him. Sister Subhadra was instructed to keep watch and ensure Krishna wasn't nearby while the gopis spoke of Krishna. But after a while Subhadra was so overwhelmed by the gopis' devotion and their stories that she became completely engrossed in listening. She didn't see the brothers Krishna and Balarama approaching. As the brothers listened their hairs stood on end, their arms retracted, their eyes grew larger and larger, and they smiled broadly in ecstasy. That is why Jagannath, Balarama and Subhadra look like they do.

This form is worshiped by Vaishnavas as the abstract form of Krishna. The deities – Jagannath, Balabhadra and Subhadra are usually worshipped in the Temple, but once in every Asadha Masa, they are brought out onto the main high street of Puri and pulled on huge chariots through the streets of Puri. It is from these huge chariots that the English word 'juggernaut' comes.

Millions of devotees attend this festival every year, including the King of Puri, who sweeps the path in front of Lord Jagannatha cart.

and most famous Jagannath deity is in the city of Puri, in Orissa, India where each year the famous Rath Yatra festival takes place. There are two interesting stories associated with this deity. First is the story of how Krishna appeared to a great devotee of the lord, King Indradymuna and ordered him to carve a deity from a log he would find washed up on the sea shore. King Indradymuna found a mysterious old Brahmin carpenter to carve the king was only pacified when the muni called Narada appeared and explained that the form the king now sees is a legitimate form of the supreme personality of godhead. The second festival is known as Ratha Yatra. The Rath carts themselves are huge wooden structures built new every year and are pulled by the millions of pilgrims who turn up for the event from all parts of the globe. The festival commemorates Krishna's return to His home in Vrindavan after a long period of separation from the

Judicial Reforms in India: Challenges and Imperatives

Prof (Dr.) S N Tripathy

The Constitution of India consists of three pillars: the legislature, the executive, and the judiciary. Among these, the judiciary is particularly crucial due to its independence. However, the system must be robust and vigorous to fulfil its role effectively. India's judicial structure includes the Supreme Court, the High Court, and the District Court or Special Tribunal. To ensure productivity and clarity and to lead India positively, the judiciary must operate at the highest standard. Unfortunately, it has become weak, ineffective, and sluggish. Justice delivery could be faster, but judge appointments are controversial, disciplinary mechanisms are rarely effective, hierarchy is often favoured over merit, women are under-represented, and constitutional matters usually languish in the Supreme Court for years.

India has one of the highest numbers of under-trial prisoners, approximately 4.2 lakhs, who await trials and can't be released on bail due to serious crime allegations or their vulnerability. One major reform needed is the clearance of such trials to reduce the burden on innocent individuals. An example is the case of Nambi Narayan, an ISRO scientist whose career was falsely ruined, and despite being offered compensation, he never received it.

The biggest drawback of the Indian judiciary is the delay in justice. A fast and efficient court system is essential to maximizing practical judgments. As the saying goes, "Justice delayed is justice denied." The system must ensure cases are resolved promptly with appropriate justice. Acting decisively is the only option to provide faster trials with effective judgments.

Around five crore cases are pending in Indian courts, raising significant concerns about the judiciary's efficiency. Cases are often filed due to ego and personal disputes, creating unnecessary complications and setbacks for the courts. Both the public and judiciary share responsibility for this issue. Managing the workload of judges and lawyers is crucial to clearing these cases. Most pending cases are in district courts, highlighting the need to improve their functioning. Reforms should focus on judges, lawyers, and case filing processes. Procedures should be flexible and straightforward to prevent cases from lingering and ensure justice is served.

Numerous judicial positions exist at all levels, from three vacant seats in the Supreme Court to over 5,000 in district courts. Filling these vacancies is essential, but more than merely appointing judges is required. Increasing the number of judges can significantly transform the system. Moreover, providing lawyers at every court level for those who cannot afford high fees is necessary to prevent injustice.

The Indian judiciary has a minimal number of working hours. Despite being the world's largest democracy, Indian judges work only 25 hours a week and around 220 days a year. Excessive holidays and weekends add substantial trauma to the public. Increasing working hours and managing holidays in shifts will ensure smooth and effective functioning.

While India leads digitally in the global market, the judiciary still relies heavily on paper work. Introducing paperless work and significantly boosting the judiciary's infrastructure is essential. Shockingly, judges are often selected based on caste and religion, with high positions awarded through nepotism rather than merit and qualifications. Those involved in false accusations should face the same punishments as the guilty. Special night batches can be introduced to expedite the system. High costs and inaccessibility should be eradicated to ensure equality.

Corruption within the system also necessitates judicial reform. Political interference and bribery are prevalent, undermining the judiciary's integrity. Judges may face pressure to rule for political interests, and refusing to comply can lead to swift political retaliation. Bribery can occur throughout the judicial process, from delaying or accelerating verdicts to deciding cases in a particular way (<https://www.thehindu.com/opinion/op-ed/indias-judiciary-and-the-slackening-cog-of-trust/article65394817.ece#>). Lawyers may also charge additional fees to expedite or delay cases. The judiciary needs detailed scenarios for financing courts and criteria for public prosecution.

Judicial reform involves changes to the legal system, including the court structure, laws, and procedures. These reforms aim to enhance the justice system's efficiency, transparency, and effectiveness, ensuring it upholds the rule of law and provides fair and timely justice to all citizens. Potential reforms include changes to laws and regulations, the organization of the court system, the appointment and training of judges, trial procedures, and the use of technology to streamline court operations.

Maintaining the independence of the judiciary is essential for preserving its integrity and impartiality. However, complete independence can sometimes result in a lack of accountability. Therefore, it is crucial to balance judicial independence with accountability.

Judicial corruption manifests in two forms: political interference and bribery. Political branches often interfere in the judicial process, pressuring judges to favour political interests, with swift retaliation for non-compliance. Bribery can occur throughout the judicial process, with judges accepting bribes to delay or accelerate verdicts, accept or deny appeals, or decide cases in specific ways. Court officials and lawyers also demand bribes for expedited or delayed services.

Influential individuals often exploit the system to cause delays. For instance, in the author's experience with Criminal Revision Application 552/201 under IPC Sections 7406, 420, 467, 468, 471, rw34, pending in the District and Sessions Court in Pune, Maharashtra, the case was adjourned 51 times at the argument stage.

There are provisions for the speedy disposal of cases involving senior citizens. Still, in the author's own experience, a case at the final hearing stage in the High Court of Mumbai was adjourned for over three years due to the influence exerted by the opposing party.

Despite years of independence, India still struggles with its judiciary system, and people remain discontent. Although progress has been made, significant reforms are needed to enhance the existing system and ensure it delivers fair and timely justice.

Despite years of independence, India grapples with an inefficient judiciary, leaving many citizens dissatisfied. While progress has been made, substantial reforms are still necessary to improve the system.

India's judicial system requires significant reforms to ensure fairness and efficiency. Resolving political interference, bribery, and systemic inefficiencies are critical steps towards restoring public trust and delivering timely justice.

Who is predication mid-term poll of Lok Sabha

It is almost sure that the Indian Parliament would witness acrimonious debates and a lot of uproar during the forthcoming budget session of the parliament. After the impressive show of Congress in the recent Lok Sabha election, Congress leader Rahul Gandhi looks in a very combative mood. He is attacking the policies of NDA government. Rahul Gandhi is also elected leader of the opposition in Lok Sabha.

With just 99 seats in Lok Sabha, some Congress leaders are expecting miracles. They believe that Rahul Gandhi to become Prime Minister of India. Congress leaders, including, Bhupesh Baghel, former Chief Minister of Chattisgarh. Baghel is hoping for mid-term poll. Baghel predicted that the country was going to witness a mid-term general election within one year. Baghel's remarks came on a day when the BJP-led NDA MPs chose Narendra Modi as their leader and the next Prime Minister. Is anyone in India ready for the mid-term poll other than some Congress leaders?

Will we see a mid-term poll? Will Rahul Gandhi to become Prime Minister of the country after the mid-term poll as some claim? While only time will tell whether these predictions would come true or not, noted author and astrologer Dr. J.P. Sharma 'Trikha' says that the present NDA government at the centre under Prime Minister Narendra Modi would complete its term.

It may be recalled that

moon sign is Scorpio.

He was born on September

17, 1950. He is ruled by Mars. Scorpios are very intelligent and shrewd,

and they possess

leadership qualities.

They are born leaders.

Mr. Modi has proved this repeatedly.

What Mumbai based Dr.

J. P. Sharma 'Trikha'

predicted proved right

when it comes to Lok

Sabha elections.

Otherwise the country

was expecting a landslide victory for the NDA.

Dr. J. P. Sharma 'Trikha'

predicted that NDA

would just manage to form the government

only. It would not get a huge victory. That was the time when he was criticised by some for making

goodwill, astrologers have gained significant respect from all quarters.

Surely, the Lok Sabha results surprised many, many people and exposed some so-called political pundits who made predictions while talking to the media. If we move away from the Lok Sabha results, Modi's government is likely to face a lot of demands from allies, which helped him secure a majority in parliament. Naidu, who is seeking more financial aid from the Union government for development in the state's capital and other parties in Modi's alliance, have already demanded more funds for their states. NDA's two main allies, Janata Dal in Bihar and Telugu Desham Party in Andhra Pradesh are asking for more funds from the Modi government.

Andhra Pradesh chief minister N Chandrababu Naidu recently met Prime Minister Narendra Modi in the national Capital. According to a person aware of the details, Naidu, who is seeking more financial aid from the Union government for development in the state's capital and other infrastructure projects, was "hopeful" of the state's wish list being met. The TDP, which has been accommodated in the Union cabinet, has demanded an increase in financial assistance to Andhra Pradesh in lieu of a special category status. Dr. J. P. It may be recalled that Congress, accusing the Modi government, of doing little to provide jobs for the youth. Will Rahul Gandhi become PM in the near future? While all the Congress leaders and workers pray that he (Rahul Gandhi) becomes the Prime Minister of India, what stars say about him. Rahul, who turned 54 on June 19, is showing fastest rates among major economies, but, voters have pointed to disparities on the ground, with growth more visible in cities, than in the vast hinterland. The economy has jumped five places to be the fifth-largest in the world, in the past decade, under Modi's rule, and he has said he will lift it to the third position. However, the country's per capita income still remains the lowest among G20 nations. Pandit 'Trikha' predicates no headway in our ties with either

China or Pakistan. He sees a lot of protests from opposition parties on the issue of unemployment. It may be recalled that Congress, accusing the Modi government, of doing little to provide jobs for the youth. Will Rahul Gandhi become PM in the near future? While all the Congress leaders and workers pray that he (Rahul Gandhi) becomes the Prime Minister of India, what stars say about him. Rahul, who turned 54 on June 19, is showing serious signs of change, as he gradually turns out to be a man with a mission and purpose. He is improving as a leader. He speaks well. He meets the victims from Hathras to Manipur.

Says another Delhi based astrologer, who does not want to be quoted- "I don't see Rahul becoming the PM of India for another five-six years. Like all those whose sun signs are Gemini, his strengths are that he is adaptable, outgoing, and intelligent—there's never a dull moment with a Gemini. However, their weaknesses are that they're indecisive, impulsive, unreliable, and nosy—be careful telling a Gemini your deepest darkest secrets."

In nutshell, we can safely say that while the NDA government led by Mr. Modi would face many challenges in the next five years, it would not fall apart.

KOLKATA, (KCN): The youth are the pillars of our society. They are our future. If we don't join hands to save them from the evils of our society like various forms of substance addiction like smoking, vaping, alcoholism and other forms of abstract addiction of smart phones, online gaming/gambling/betting and obscenity to garner 'views' and 'followers' online, our own future is at stake. MOUNTAINS, FORESTS, RIVERS AND SEASHORES APPEAL TO SOMETHING DEEP WITHIN US: PRESIDENT DROUPADI MURMU

NEW DELHI (KCN): The President of India, Smt Droupadi Murmu, spent some time this morning (July 8, 2024) at the sea beach of the holy city of Puri, a day after participating in the annual Rath Yatra. Later she penned her thoughts about the experience of being in close communion with nature. Here is the text that was posted on X: "There are places that bring us in closer touch with the essence of life and remind us that we are part of nature. Mountains, forests, rivers and seashores appeal to something deep within us. As I walked along the seashore today, I felt a communion with the surroundings – the gentle wind, the roar of the waves, and the immense expanse of water. It was a meditative experience. It brought to me a profound inner peace that I had also felt when I had a darshan of Mahaprabhu Shri Jagannathji yesterday. And I am not alone in having such an experience; all of us can feel that way when we encounter something that is far larger than us, that sustains us and that makes our lives meaningful. In the hustle and bustle of the daily grind, we lose this connection with Mother Nature. Humankind believes it has mastered nature and is exploiting it for its own short-term benefits. The result is for all to see. This summer, many parts of India suffered a terrible series of heatwaves. Extreme weather events have become more frequent around the globe in recent years. The situation is projected to be far worse in the decades to come. More than seventy percent of the surface of the earth is made up of oceans, and global warming is leading to a rise in global sea levels, threatening to submerge coastal areas. The oceans and the rich variety of flora and fauna found there have suffered heavily due to different kinds of pollution.

winds and waves of the sea. Following our ancestors, they worship the sea as God. There are two ways, I believe, to meet the challenge of protection and conservation of the environment; broader steps that can come from governments and international organisations, and smaller, local steps that we can take as citizens. The two are, of course, complementary. Let us pledge to do what we can do – individually, locally – for the sake of a better tomorrow. We owe it to our children."

Kewda, lifeline of Ganjam farmers

Ganjam (KCN): Kewda flower plant, which is found in many coastal areas of the country, is considered a cash crop for farmers in Ganjam district.

The coastal areas of Ganjam district have the maximum concentration of Kewda forests in the country. Moreover, Kewda has also been cultivated here since ages as the flower is considered to be an asset for the farmers of this district.

Apart from the flower, other parts of the Kewda plant are also commercially exploited in the district.

Kewda is mainly grown in Chhatrapur, Chikiti, and Rangeilunda blocks, while it is also cultivated in Khallikote, Patrapur, and Kanishi blocks. Villages such as Kelua Palli, Indrakhi, Tulu, Chhandaanbadai, Golabandha, Sanapadar, Mananti, Bishwanathpur and Markandi are known for their large Kewda flower plantations.

The Kewda plant grows up to 4-6 metres in height. Lingraj Sahu, who grows Kewda flower in Indrakhi village, said that the plantation constitutes the lifeline for many farmers in various blocks of the district. The Kewda plant blooms three times a year – between April to May, July to September, and December to February. The plant starts blooming when it is about five to seven years old. It is said that as the tree ages, it produces more flowers. An 18 to 20-year-old Kewda plant can produce around 40 flowers, while a plant aged between 30 and 40 years gives a yield of around 40 to 60 flowers.

The Kewda plant thrives well in the coastal sandy soil. Harvesters, or agents, collect the flowers and bring those to distillation units. Fresh and mature Kewda flowers are sold at prices ranging from Rs 15 to 40 per flower. The petals and the lower part of the Kewda flower are removed, and the filaments are separated before they are placed in large brass or copper vessels for distillation. The hot vapour through the flowers is passed through a paraffin filtration system, and, thereafter, through a low-temperature condensation system (roots) to extract the essence. About 15 to 20 milligrams of essence can be extracted from approximately one thousand flowers. The high-quality essence collected from these flowers is sold at prices amounting to lakhs of rupees. One litre of Kewda flower essence usually fetches over Rs 4 lakh in the international market. However, it is alleged that the farmers in Ganjam get anything between Rs 10,000-15,000 as proceeds of sale of one litre of the essence.

There is a significant demand for Kewda flower essence in the international market. Annually, the Kewda flower trade generates around Rs 50-60 crore rupees. The essence is particularly used in the manufacturing of pan masala, zarda, sherbet, sweets, incense sticks, and medicinal products. The essence is sold to various states and countries, providing a good source of income to the farmers.

Noted social worker Natabar Sahu said there are around 170 to 180 Kewda flower distillation units in Ganjam district, benefiting around 5 lakh harvesters. There are about 1.5 lakh people involved in the trade. Aju Nayak, a Kewda flower harvester, said that the industry in Berhampur has been adversely affected, particularly due to cyclones like Phailin which destroyed around 30 per cent of the Kewda forests in the coastal areas of Ganjam district. However, efforts to regenerate Kewda forests have provided a renewed source of livelihood to the harvesters. Training programmes have been conducted at regular intervals to examine the quality and requirements of the flowers. Despite this, there has been some dissatisfaction among the harvesters due to a perceived reduction in the support and incentives provided, he said.

The Odisha University of Agriculture and Technology (OUAT), along with other research institutions, has decided to provide technical assistance and encouragement to Kewda flower harvesters. However, these initiatives have not yet been fully implemented. Locals said if the necessary governmental incentives are provided, the harvesters would greatly benefit.

Apart from the Kewda essence business, some harvesters also make handicraft products such as baskets, mats, trays, and chairs from Kewda leaves, supplementing their income.

Abhishek credits IPL for lack of nerves in debut series

New Delhi: Abhishek Sharma has credited the Indian Premier League for ensuring a smooth transition for the young players who make it to the national side. Abhishek, playing just his second T20I, replicated the intent he showcased in IPL 2024 and managed to thrill the Harare crowd with a match-winning 46-ball ton. His century ensured the series was level as India thrashed Zimbabwe in the second T20I.

"I think IPL plays a big role in this because as a youngster, as a debutant, we didn't feel much pressure when we came to represent the country," Abhishek said. "It's always a great motivation once you are playing for the country. Unfortunately it didn't go well in yesterday's game, but my mindset and intent was same. I had a word with the other debutants too, we've all played cricket together a long time, since U14 days I'd say. I think it's all about approach in T20, about intent. If I show intent and if it is my day, it usually goes like this."

Abhishek, who credited former India allrounder Yuvraj Singh's contribution to his game, hit eight sixes in his whirlwind knock. "All this is due to the hard work I've done," he said. "Special thanks to my dad who always encouraged me to play lofted shots even when I was a kid. Usually coaches don't allow you to play lofted shots much. My dad used to tell me that if you want to play a lofted shot, it should go out of the ground. For me, it's always been there from my childhood that if I'm confident, I like to express myself."

The young opener revealed that he had used Shubman Gill's bat for the game, something he has regularly done in the past as well. The two players, coming from the same state, had grown up playing together right from a young age. "The journey has been very beautiful," Abhishek looked back. "When we started playing, we were around 10-11 years and we have been playing since U12 together. The ultimate goal was to represent the country. I have said this before that the first call I got (about selection) was from Shubman, he was very happy.

"I played with his [Shubman's] bat today and it went really well, special thanks to him for the bat. This happens from the U12 days, whenever I think it's a pressure game or it's a match I should perform, I take his bat. Even in the IPL, I ask for his bat. Even today it went really well."

Abhishek admitted that the players were disappointed after losing the opening game of the series, especially given the fact that the first-choice squad had just won the T20 World Cup a few days prior to that. "Losing a game like that after the country has was disappointing for the players," he said. "But still, we were all youngsters and have been playing together and against each other since childhood."

"So none of us went into our shells after losing, we were instead all together and thinking about the hard work we put in all those years and how this is the ultimate goal for all of us, so we should enjoy and focus on the next thing. Mindset was to forget what has happened and focus on the next match."

With the series now tied at 1-1, the third game will be played on July 10 at the same venue.

Rain has the final say after another strong SA show

New Delhi: Heavy showers brought a premature end to the second T20I between India and South Africa in Chennai, forcing the game to a no result. It meant that the three-match series continued to be at 1-0 in favour of the visitors who now have an unassailable lead. They put on another impressive batting display after being put into bat by Indian captain Harmanpreet Kaur. For South Africa, the template was quite similar to the opening game with all the batters showing extreme intent from the get-go. Laura Wolvaardt (22 off 12) got the team off to a flier before she perished to Pooja Vastrakar but Tazmin Brits (52 off 39) continued her stellar form with a crafty fifty to keep the Proteas going.

Marizanne Kapp (22 off 12) and Anneke Bosch (40 off 32) were the other major contributors to boost South Africa past the 175-run mark. Deepi Sharma (2-20) was the pick of the Indian bowlers but she had very little support from the other end as runs kept leaking. The last two overs of the innings went for 31 runs, giving Wolvaardt's girls big momentum heading to the innings break but the game never resumed after that due to relentless rains.

New Delhi: The Netherlands stormed into the semi-final of the Euro 2024 with a comeback win against Turkiye on Saturday, 6 July. Stefan de Vrij turned saviour for the side as they kept away a spirited challenge from dark horses Turkiye.

A spirited Turkiye were knocked out by Netherlands in the quarter-final of Euro 2024 on Saturday, 6 July. Playing at the Olympiastadion in Berlin, the Dutch held on despite Turkiye taking the lead in the first half, to reach their first Euro semi-final in 20 years.

Turkiye were fantastic throughout the match, but were undone in two crucial moments. The first one came from de Vrij in the 70th minute of

Bart Verbruggen made two crucial saves - first, a low freekick from Arda Guler that was finger-tipped into the side bar - and then a reflex save from close range to keep the Oranje ahead in the game. Turkiye were the more creative of the two teams, breaking the lines from all parts of the pitch. Hakan Calhanoglu, Arda Guler ran the show in the attacking mid-field, while Baris Alper Yilmaz ran himself to the ground, driving the ball in the final third. Arda and Calhanoglu's street smarts, mixed with Yilmaz's character and ability to give hundred per cent in every single challenge he made helped Turkiye take the lead in the first half of the match.

Guler, the youngster who was bought by Real Madrid last season, showed his mettle in a way that will be remembered for long time. The 19-year-old, often compared to Mesut Ozil, showed his silky touch throughout the game, assisting the Dutch controlled the ball, first Turkiye goal. From the right side of the box, Guler floated in a cross with his wrong foot, which was met by defender Samet Akaydin to hand Turkiye the lead in the 35th minute. Turkiye could have sat back and tried to defend their lead for the rest of the game, but they kept pushing their case throughout the match. The Dutch looked tired and beaten at the end of the first and were only brought back to life by the introduction of Wout Weghorst their towering 6'6" forward. Weghorst's presence in the box, freed up Memphis Depay, who linked with Cody Gakpo on the left and Xavi Simmons running through the centre to create Netherlands' gameplay. Once the Dutch Turkiye were compact in their defensive shape. The first time they were caught napping was in the 70th minute when Depay found himself in acres of space just outside the box from where he could put a simple cross in. Once the equalizer came, the Dutch calculatively pushed for another goal but were let down by poor decision-making, especially from Depay. At the end, the tired-looking Turks, drawing last vestiges of energy from rabid support from the majority of the capacity crowd, gamely sought to take the game into extra time but had desperate efforts blocked by the Orange defence and Verbruggen made another key save in stoppage time.
