Odisha Farmers Get 6K Cr PM KISAN Funds

New Delhi(KCN): The Centre has released Rs 5969.61

This was informed by Minister of Agriculture and Farmers

Welfare Narendra Singh Tomar in Lok Sabha recently. He said the PM-KISAN Scheme was launched in an aim to provide income support to all landholding farmers' families (subject to certain exclusion criteria related to higher income status) across the country and to enable them to take care of expenses related to agriculture and allied activities as well as domestic needs and save them from the clutches of money lenders. The scheme is effective from December 1, 2018. Under the Scheme, an income support of Rs 6000 per annum, in 3 equal installments, is provided to all eligible farmer families directly into their bank accounts through Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT) mode.

In Odisha, an amount of Rs 59,69,61,66,000 has been released to 39,36,731 since inception of the scheme (as on February 3, 2022), Tomar said. As per the statement of the Union Minister, highest Rs 451.43 crore has been released to 2,90,717 farmers of Mayurbhanj district while lowest Rs 59.74 crore distributed among 37,045 farmers of Jharsuguda district under the Scheme. Similarly, Rs 222.29 crore has been released to 1,50,806 farmers of Angul, Rs 325.28 crore given to 2,10,528 farmers of Russia has no plans to mediate between India-China talks over standoff in Ladakh: Russian envoy

MOSCOW(KCN): Russia has no plans to mediate between India and China over the border issue in Ladakh, said newly appointed Russian Ambassador to India Denis Alipov, adding that if both the countries expressed a wish for an intermediary then Russia can consider it. India and China have been engaged in holding talks on the Line of Actual Control (LAC) in the Eastern Ladakh area to resolve the standoff. So far, 14 rounds of talks have been held between India and China.

The talks led to some disengagement of troops from several points along the LAC, but not all of them. "No. We have no such plans [to be an

Days after journalist's death, youth killed in Maoist blast in Kandhamal district

BHUBANESWAR/ PHULBANI(KCN): In fresh Maoist violence in poll-bound Odisha, a 20-year-old youth was killed in an improvised explosive device (IED) blast triggered by the Naxals at Kiamunda village in Kandhamal district on Wednesday. The incident comes four days after a journalist died in a similar fashion in Kalahandi district. The deceased was identified as Priyaranjan Kanhar of Kiamunda village. At around 8 am, Kanhar was passing through by Maoists on Monday night. The next day, posters and banners threatening locals to boycott the ensuing panchayat elections had surfaced near Kiamunda. A bomb detection and disposal squad had diffused two IEDs near Kiamunda on Tuesday and combat operation was halted in the evening. "Out of frustration, Maoists have now started targeting civilians too. To ensure smooth passage of panchayat polls, area domination exercises by local police, District Voluntary Force, Special Operations Group and Central Reserve Police Force personnel are continuing in all Naxal affected areas of the State including Swabhimanchal," said a senior police officer. On Wednesday too, posters and banners of Kalahandi-Kandhamal-Boudh-Nayagarh (KKBN) division of the banned CPI Maoist were found in different areas of Balliguda town, triggering panic among locals. On February 5, a journalist working with a vernacular daily was killed in an IED blast triggered by Maoists in Madanpur Rampur block of Kalahandi district.

Under the banner of Prelude Productions and Kaveri Film Entertainment, these 35 minutes long woman-centric tale tells the story through the eyes of a tribal woman named Phoola. A government disheartened to see her young tribal maid, an ever-smiling Phoola, turned out to be a victim of domestic violence. Later, Phoola is believed to be possessed by an evil spirit and she is exorcized by the community priest and Meera becomes a helpless spectator to this sad state of affairs. Meera is amazed to witness the tribal society believing in supernatural powers that have been concludes with a twist enquiring this pertinent question if this age-old superstition can be employed as an instrument of resistance, confrontation and liberation. Ratho, who has always believed in giving opportunities to the new generation of techies and artists, said, "It's a pleasure witnessing such talented lady directors coming up with women-centric films with a fresh come forward and show something new through the medium of film. The social message in Dahani will definitely touch everybody." Excited for the screening, Subhasmita said, "It has been a hectic yet interesting journey of 365 days for this film. Thanks to all my team members and Prelude Productions for trusting me and my work. I am eagerly waiting for the honest reviews from my viewers."

'We can be heroes' movie review: Super-kids save the day

Just last week, Robert Rodriguez was being lauded for being part of what is Jonas), the director of the Heroics programme. But then, when did any gets, the colours... But it isn't all for children. The film takes pot-considered one of the best things to happen to the Star Wars Universe: The Mandalorian. This week, after dabbling with big budgets, he comes up with We can be Heroes, a spiritual sequel to his own film, The Adventures of Sharkboy and Lavagirl.

It's a Spy Kids-meets-Avengers film. Aliens attack Earth. The superheroes (led by Pedro Pascal), known as the Heroics in this film, come a cropper. Nepotism comes into the picture, with the children of the Heroics getting pushed to the forefront. There is an Avengers-inspired spaceship that spits out smaller spaceships with which the superheroes get kidnapped. They are kept safe in a bunker by Ms Granada (a superbly hammy Priyanka Choprafilm kid ever listen to the adults and stay put? Each of the superkids use their superpower under the able guidance of Missy Moreno (Ya Ya Gosselin), who interestingly is the muggle among wizards and yet, the leader. We can be Heroes is a film made for kids, and the message is that anyone can be a hero, superpowers notwithstanding. Just like his Spy Kids films, Rodriguez paints this film with dreamy colours like pink and perky purples, and shoots it as if the scenes were pages straight out of a kids' comic. In one scene, a super-kid even comments that the villain's lair feels made for kids. This is a film that is designed for kids, and this audience segment is best suited to enjoy the gags, the highs, the charades, the gadshots at the big-ticket superhero films, for being needlessly destructive. Missy and her friends express their unhappiness about their superhero-parents fighting villains in crowded areas. In some ways, Rodriguez tries to level up the film for the not-so-young audience members, but the saccharine ending, and the overall simplicity makes it quite clear who he's targeting with this film. Growing up, we didn't ask logical questions of Spy Kids or The Adventures of Sharkboy and Lavagirl, and simply took in the sights and sounds created by this whimsical filmmaker. For this generation of kids, Rodriguez has created We can be Heroes. The kids are safe, so long as this filmmaker is around. The adults may want to wait for a version of Sin City though.

Karnataka sets up 3-judge bench to dissect hijab row

Karnataka's hijab row which has found reverberations in Pakistan and prompted Asaduddin Owaisi to tell that country to mind its own business- tests if India is secular or a

Hindu majoritarian state. The Karnataka high court has already set up a three-judge Constitution bench headed by the chief justice to examine the judgments pronounced by the Supreme Court on Article 25 to 27 on what constitutes essential practices of the Islamic faith linked to the Karnataka Education Act, 1983 and the Right to Education Act, 2009.

The hijab row has spread from Udupi to Bagalkot, Vijayapura, Mandya and Shivamogga Karnataka prompting the Opposition MPs to walkout from the Lok Sabha to demand the government make its stand clear. For the Karnataka Education Act, 1983 is subsumed by the Right to Education Act, 2009 which in turn, is subsumed by Articles 25 to 27 of the Constitution which permits restrictions of health, public order and morality on the citizens' right to practice, profess and propagate any religion. The right to wear a hijab will determine whether minorities really are free to profess and practice their own religion.

Muslim girls must defy gender stereotypes to get an education by escaping ghettoization to build their careers. After the oil boom collapse in the Gulf countries, Muslims have been deprived of quality education because their madrassas fuel the stereotypes of being sectarian seminaries where religious indoctrination overrides vocational training.

Orthodox parents may force their daughters to wear the hijab outside their homes which is their fundamental right. So, invoking section 133 (2) of the Karnataka Education Act, 1983 to prevent these Muslim girls from entering classrooms will thwart their education. Priyanka Gandhi's assertion that women have a right whether to wear a bikini or a hijab may be anathema to a majoritarian-turned-authoritarian government accused of using Pegasus to snoop on us.

What constitutes an essential part of a religious practice must be ascertained with reference to the doctrines of that religion itself, the Supreme Court held in the 1954 Shirur Mutt case which ironically also originated in Udupi where the hijab row began. But legal scholars criticize this crucial test because in general judges are not theological experts.

Every religion has its own unique symbols – be it the Sikh turban, the Muslim burqa, the Christian Cross, the Hindu tikka on the forehead or the Parsi sadra. And every Indian has the right to wear it proudly subject to health, public order and morality. The right to practice one's religion is a negative right which means the state cannot enact laws to nullify this right.

The successive judgments of the Supreme Court have whittled down secularism as the founding fathers envisaged it. Today, the government propagates that its version of secularism is to treat all religions equally. But if we believe that, we are living in a delusional world. Most of the laws enacted from 2014 favour a certain community – never mind what the Constitution declares.

In a 2004 ruling, the Supreme Court held the Ananda Marga sect had no fundamental right to perform Tandava dance in public because it was not an essential religious practice whereas in 2016, a three-judge bench of the Supreme Court upheld the discharge of a Muslim airman from the Indian Air Force for keeping a beard.

The IAF airman was discharged because keeping a beard did not constitute an essential religious practice in Islam as distinguished from Sikhism which enjoins its followers to grow their hair. Using the same logic, wearing of a hijab is also not an essential religious practice of Islam.

The right to profess, practice and propagate any religion of your choice subject to decency, public order and morality has become a chimera because laws enacted by a Hindu majoritarian state have prohibited beef, raised the marriageable age of girls to 21 years and made it compulsory to declare before a magistrate that one is changing one's religion to avoid charges of love jihad – of which there was no data, according to the government's own admission.

So, now banning the hijab maybe viewed with suspicion because although it is not an essential religious practice, it is part of customary law. The Quran enjoins all Muslim women to be submissive to men who are their guardians and protectors which implies Karnataka cannot ban Muslim women from wearing the hijab.

The counter to that is the last major judgment of the Supreme Court in 2017 known as Shyara Bano versus Union of India recognized the State could enact laws regulating or restricting any economic, financial, political or other secular activity linked to pernicious religious practices.

But the five-judge Constitution bench recorded the founding fathers arguments against the state interfering in religious customs by enacting a uniform civil code to homogenize laws of inheritance, marriage and divorce. Any citizen could take the state to court because such laws were justiciable if they restricted fundamental rights.

The right to wear a piece of cloth, whether it is an essential religious practice or not, is part of the right to privacy, which like the Shyara Bano case, was also validated by the Supreme Court in 2017. Senior advocate Devadutt Kamath argued in the Karnataka high court that the state did not have the power to ban the hijab.

The state can enact laws to curtail fundamental rights such as freedom of speech and expression, the right to choose your attire, and the twin rights of religious freedom which is part of the right to privacy. But these laws will become justiciable because it is ultimately the courts which must decide what is part of an essential religious practice.

Politicians can ban the hijab to inflame religious sentiments. For politics and law are instruments of oppression and compromise. Faith is not.

Dr Olav Albuquerque holds a Ph.D in law and is a senior journalist-cum-advocate of the Bombay high court He is an honorary member of the Goa Union of Journalists.

Gender equality and Women's entry to Sabarimala

As the pilgrim season of the Mandala Makaravilakku festival culminates, the famous Sabarimala hill shrine in Kerala and the endless forest garden surrounding it have fallen into a deep meditative silence once again. Endless stretch of forest to the borders of Tamil Nadu remains deathly silent. This year arrangements for the pilgrim season were made under the directives of the Kerala High Court with necessary measures put in place to check the pandemic. The state government, in a significant move, allowed 30000 devotees to visit the shrine through a virtual queue system every day. The Makaravilakku festival was on January 14 and the temple was closed on January 20. Sabarimala temple was in controversy for years as the traditions of the temple forbade entry of women of menstruating age into its premises. A pilgrimage to this shrine is of great importance to millions of devotees. 60 kilometers away from my house, the shrine and the Lord Ayyappa have always been a subject of great reverence for me personally and a matter of deep faith for my family.

The Supreme Court's verdict on women entry to this popular shrine in Kerala had been a great shock for a significant population of the state. The social impact began to be visible as the women folk of the majority community in the state came out to the streets against the CPI (M) led government. Sabarimala, as I know it from my childhood, has been a spiritual shrine that attracts millions of devotees every year. Interestingly, it was the first time in the history of any verdict that the beneficiaries of the decree directly flooded to the streets in millions rejecting its efficacy and questioning its intentions. 'The Ready to Wait' campaign by the women of the state was unprecedented in many ways. It was a movement of the women by the women and for the women. While they stood against the verdict of the court, they were ready to wait to visit the shrine until their menopause age dawned in. It was in 1990 a case was filed in the Kerala High Court alleging that women were entering Sabarimala occasionally, probably unnoticed, and the petitioner demanding a carpet ban on women of certain age to the shrine. The Kerala High Court, citing the need of preserving the age-old customs of the shrine, banned the women of certain age from entering it. In 2006 the matter was taken to the Supreme Court by a group of lawyers from the Indian Young ban as a violation of women's right to worship in Hindu spiritual centers. The court viewed that any exception placed on women on biological differences violates the Constitution. Therefore, temple because she was a woman. For them, both genders were blessed with unique biological capabilities and that should be respected. This entry ban was only applicable to Sabarimala and temples dedicated to the same deity elsewhere did not the ban was lifted and the state government, to implement the court verdict, against the will of millions of devotees, managed to intrude into the sanctity of the temple, by bringing two women from the ultra-left social groups in disguise of security personnel.

Lawyers' Association which demanded the ban be lifted, citing the

Historical evidence from the 19th century reveals that menstruating women were banned from entering the temple for almost 200 years. The principal deity Lord Ayyappa is treated as a celibate (Naishtika Brahmachari) and the customs prohibited women of menstruating age from entering into his abode. The argument was mainly considering the deity as a person and his eligibility to enjoy the constitutional right to privacy by denying women of that age from visiting him. On the contrary, menstruation being purely a biological factor and exclusively a matter of womanhood, the petitioners seeking a lift on the ban were of the opinion that no woman should be prohibited from entering the temple because she was a woman. For them, both genders were blessed with unique biological capabilities and that should be respected. This entry ban was only applicable to Sabarimala and temples dedicated to the same deity elsewhere did not have such restrictions. Photos and idols of the deity can be seen in almost every South Indian family. The apex court viewed the whole issue as a dominance of the patriarchal entity in the present-day society. It also viewed that excluding the women of menstruating age from a pilgrimage was equally amounting to untouchability. Every year the preparations for the pilgrim season start on the first day of the Malayalam month Vrischikam. The pilgrim season begins as the devotees start observing austerities for 41 days and climbing the hill shrine with spiritual offerings for Lord Ayyappa which they carry bundled on their head. These are the symbolic representations of the sinful karmas of the devotee, who indeed carries them to the Lord as an act of surrender and regret. He opens the bundle of sinful karmas at the shrine and takes refuge at the lotus feet of Lord Ayyappa. 41 days of penance by the pilgrim undergoing rigorous religious practices transforms the ambiance of the family purely into a spiritual one. Menstruating ladies are not welcome to certain places of the houses as their presence is viewed to bring impurity and disrupt the penance.

The Sabarimala shrine and its economic importance in Kerala was one of the reasons behind the state government's over enthusiasm to implement the court order against the ban. Every year, the pilgrim season pumps a huge amount of money to the state's exchequer. When the sanctum sanctorum alone receives more than 200 crores in the form of cash and ornaments and other revenues from the prasadam distribution in a pilgrim season, the government gets an additional 1000 crore or more as revenue recovery from various pilgrim related activities from across the state. More than three crore devotees are estimated to take to the pilgrimage from different parts of the world and the importance and the impact of the temple on the socio-economic scenario of the state is unparalleled. The state government was much aware of this fact and by implementing the verdict the government wanted more devotees including the womenfolk to throng into the shrine and thereby more money to pour in.

The Sabarimala Temple is a unique institution with regard to its religious practices. As I mentioned above, the 41 days of severe abstinence transforms a devotee into a spiritual being. As he begins his austerities by putting a rosary around his neck, he becomes a swami and stops eating meat and consuming alcohol and stays away from sensual pleasures and also strictly stops using coarse language even in unfavorable situations. He is on a spiritual journey aiming to discover the divine Ayyappa principle in him. He wears simple orange or black waist cloth and lives on limited needs. The pilgrimage is a perfect example of spiritual coexistence of human beings forgetting all the differences and merging into what the Upanishads call "Tatvamasi", the divine state of the Lord in oneself. Though the major castes in the state were seen divided on the whole issue, the devotees were seen to be out in one voice against the court order and the state government's stand to implement it. More than 3000 Ayyappa devotees were arrested in the agitation and the subsequent unrest. The stalemate continued for long but this year the pilgrim season went on smoothly amidst the pandemic with the state government sensibly avoiding women entry to the shrine.

Bhubaneswar in wedding rush: 2,500 marriages in a month, more coming

BHUBANESWAR: The first two waves of Covid put on hold - or at least forced-cut - weddings in Bhubaneswar. But this time, not many are willing to back down. Not by Covid, at least although lavishness quotient may have been missing. The State Capital hosted over 2,000 weddings in last three weeks and over 500 marriage functions are

Athagarh forest division in soup over recovery of jumbo carcass

BHUBANESWAR: Months after Athagarh ranger was suspended for allegedly keeping the Forest department in dark about the death of an elephant for over a year, the forest division is in news again after recovery of another carcass in Narasinghpur range. This time too, the elephant carcass was allegedly buried without the knowledge of the higher-ups in the department. The Special Task Force (STF) of the Crime Branch that went to the site in Narasinghpur west range to recover the carcass allegedly faced stiff resistance from some forest watchers. PCCF Shashi Paul has ordered an inquiry and directed the Angul RCCF and Athagarh DFO to submit a report in this regard at the earliest. The STF is also probing the matter. An eight-member STF team headed by an additional SP rank officer recovered the carcass from Balikiari forest under Barasingha section of Narasinghpur west range in presence of an executive magistrate. When the matter came to light on Tuesday, Athagarh DFO Sudarsan Gopinath Jadav visited the spot. The Angul RCCF will also visit the spot to inquire about the incident. Forest officials will probe whether any carcass was buried in the location in the past as the decomposed bones seem to be a year old. STF, however, suspects that the carcass would be around three months old. A team of veterinary experts from OUAT will carry out the postmortem of the carcass. Meanwhile, the incident has put the Athagarh division in a fix as it has already faced embarrassment last year over burial of a carcass in violation of the Standard Operating Procedure (SOP). A 15-year-old tusker was buried in Subasi reserve forest without following due procedure and the tusks recovered were also not deposited with the division office in violation of the SOP. The Forest department suspended Athagarh forest ranger Aisha Akhtari Nisha in connection with the incident in November, 2021.

Saffron flag may become national flag some time in future: Karnataka Minister KS Eshwarappa

BENGALURU: Senior BJP leader and Karnataka Minister for Rural Development and Panchayat Raj KS Eshwarappa on Wednesday claimed 'Bhagwa dhvaj' (saffron flag), may become the national flag some time in the future. He, however, said the tricolour is the national flag now, and it should be respected by everyone. "Hundreds of years ago the chariots of Sri Ramachandra and Maruthi had saffron flags on them. Was the tricolour flag there in our country then? Now it (tricolour) is fixed as our national flag, what respect it has to be given, should be given by every person who takes food in this country, there is no question about it," Eshwarappa said. Responding to a question by reporters, whether the saffron flag can be hoisted on the red fort, he said, "not today, some day in the future."

"Discussions are today taking place in the country on 'Hindu vichara' and 'Hindutva'. People used to laugh at one point when we said Ram Mandir will be constructed in Ayodhya, aren't we constructing it now? In the same way some time in the future, after 100 or 200 or 500 years Bhagwa dhvaj may become the national flag. I don't know." Further stating that now tricolour has been constitutionally accepted as the national flag, the Minister said, it should be respected, and those who don't respect it will be a traitor. "...we are the people who hoist the saffron flag, not today some time in the future Hindu dharma will come to this country at that time we will hoist it on the Red fort, for now tricolour is our national flag, there is now doubt about it and we all respect it," the former state BJP chief added.

Odisha faces renewed Naxal heat as Centre shifts 24 companies force

BHUBANESWAR: AS CPI (Maoist) steps up violence with the five-phase panchayat polls barely days away, Odisha Police faces an uphill task in civil policing in the State. This decision of Odisha Police top brass last year to convert the SSB units into civil police could have ramifications, experts feel.

"There will come a time when the Central forces deployment will reduce and the State Police will have to meet its own requirement. That is when SSBs would Naxal-affected districts as the Centre has already diverted at least 16 companies of central armed police forces (CAPF) for redeployment in Assembly poll-bound states.

There are 94 companies of Border Security Force (BSF) and Central Reserve Police Force (CRPF) deployed in Odisha. In view of Assembly elections, the Centre has moved eight companies each to Uttar Pradesh and Punjab from the CRPF's mobilisation in the State.

Additionally, eight companies of Indian Reserve Battalion (IRB) and Special Security Battalions (SSB) from Odisha have also been deployed in UP.

With the two back-to-back IED explosions in Kalahandi and Phulbani districts claiming civilian lives, the security forces face a challenge to ensure smooth passage of rural polls in Odisha having seen at least 2,500 personnel redeployed in Uttar Pradesh and Punjab. Besides, what could pinch the State is the fact that 1,500 personnel of Special Security Battalions (SSBs) of Sambalpur and Keonjhar were attached with various districts to strengthen

Economy likely contracted 12 per cent in Q1: Report

MUMBAI: Lockdowns imposed by the states in April and May to contain the second wave of the deadly COVID-19 pandemic has likely led to the economy contracting 12 per cent in the June quarter as against 23.9 per cent contraction in the same quarter in 2020, says a brokerage report.

The economy had its worst contraction on record in FY21 at 7.3 per cent as the 2.5 months of unplanned lockdown announced by the centre with just a four-hour notice had crippled the economy in the first quarter with a massive 23.9 per cent contraction, which improved to -17.5 per cent in the second quarter.

But the economy showed a sharp V-shaped recovery from the second half when it posted a 40 bps positive growth and in Q4 clipping at 1.6 per cent, containing the overall contraction at 7.3 per cent for the year. This 12 percentage point contraction will

Monetary and fiscal policies today cannot be a 'question of either or': RBI Governor Shaktikanta Das

MUMBAI: Defending the long pause in interest rate hike and the continuing accommodative stance, Reserve Bank of India Governor Shaktikanta Das on Thursday said in current times, "monetary and fiscal policies cannot be a question of either or, but must go in tandem with each other".

For the 10th time in a row, RBI's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) on Thursday left the key rates unchanged -- the repo at 4 per cent and the reverse repo at 3.35 per cent -- and decided to continue with the accommodative policy stance.

Underlining that growth is uneven and needs to be nursed some more, Das said that "monetary and fiscal policies cannot be a question of either or, but must go in tandem with each other, especially in times like what we are going through the past two years".

To a query on whether the central bank has fallen behind the curve of its peers, Das said, "We are very clear of our stance and our assessment is very much in sync with our evolving domestic situation which is very dif-

BNP Paribas Open: Novak Djokovic makes it to entry list, would face COVID vaccine mandate

INDIAN WELLS: Top-ranked Novak Djokovic is on the entry list for the BNP Paribas Open in California, where the Serb would face a vaccine mandate. Djokovic, who was unvaccinated against COVID-19 as of last month, was detained and eventually deported from Australia for failing to meet that country's strict vaccination requirements. It prevented him from defending his Australian Open title last month.

To enter Australia, Djokovic submitted a positive test issued in Serbia on Dec. 16 for a visa exemption on the grounds that he had recently recovered from the virus. But the Australian government canceled his visa and deported him. Neither the ATP nor WTA tours require players to be vaccinated against COVID-19. However, non-US citizens must be fully vaccinated to travel to the US by plane, AHMEDABAD: India batter Rituraj Gaikwad, who had tested positive for COVID-19, has recovered and is out of isolation. However, with skipper Rohit Sharma al-

Maharashtra player is unlikely to be considered for the inconsequential match. Rituraj warmed the bench in the home T20 series against New Zealand and also did not get an Indies series, practically ruling him out of the rubber. Rituraj hasn't been included in the T20 squad and, in all likelihood, will now turn out for his home state in the upcoming Gaikwad and middle-order batter Shreyas Iyer -- tested positive for the virus during their mandatory isolation period before the start of West Indies series. Four other persons, ready making it clear that senior opener Shikhar Dhawan will open the innings in the third ODI against West Indies here on Friday, the opportunity to play against South Africa in the away ODI series. He was found to be COVID positive just four days before the start of the West

Ranji Trophy. On February 2, a COVID-19 outbreak had hit the Indian cricket team as three players -- Dhawan, reserve opener including net bowler Navdeep Saini, had also tested positive for COVID-19. Saini was on the standby list.
