Professor Amartya Sen

Professor Amartya Sen is a prominent economist whose work on development and poverty has dramatically influenced international organizations like the United Nations and the World Bank. In his essay "Poverty and Famines," Sen explores the causes of various famines from a unique perspective and identifies different meanings of poverty. He draws attention to the incidence of absolute and relative deprivation. He relates the headcount ratio of poverty to the inequality of lack of people below the poverty line. One of the critical contributions of Sen's work is his demonstration that the decline in aggregate food availability is only sometimes the primary cause of famines. Instead, he identifies various reasons that lead to different famines, including adverse effects on people experiencing poverty of steep price rises due to inflation and a reduction in market supplies due to speculative hoarding, which can further boost prices. Sen's analysis led to a controversy over whether food availability decline was the primary cause of the Bengal famine. Still, the Nobel Committee recognized the significance of his work on the famine mechanism regardless of this controversy. Sen's contribution to economics extends beyond his work on poverty and famines. He has also made significant contributions to social choice theory and welfare economics. His work on social choice theory has focused on the problem of how to aggregate individual preferences into collective decisions. Sen's approach emphasizes the importance of individual rights and freedoms, and he argues that social choices should be evaluated in terms of their impact on the wellbeing of individuals. In welfare economics, Sen has emphasized the importance of expanding the focus beyond income as the sole measure of wellbeing. He has argued that social welfare should be evaluated regarding various factors that affect people's lives, including health, education, and social connections. Sen's work on welfare economics has significantly impacted the development of human development theory, which emphasizes the importance of measuring progress in terms of people's wellbeing rather than just economic growth. Sen's contributions to economics have been recognized through numerous awards and honours, including the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Sciences 1998. His work continues to influence scholars and policy makers worldwide, and his ideas are particularly relevant in the current global challenges of poverty, inequality, and climate change. In conclusion, Professor Amartya Sen is a prominent economist whose work on development and poverty has significantly impacted international organizations and policymaking. His studies on famines, hunger, social choice theory, and welfare economics have greatly influenced the field of economics, and his ideas are particularly relevant in the current global context. Sen's emphasis on individual rights and freedoms, the importance of human wellbeing beyond income, and regular, assured food entitlements are all valuable contributions to the ongoing efforts to reduce poverty and promote sustainable development.

Sen's work on poverty and inequality is grounded in his belief that traditional economic measures, such as GDP, do not provide a complete picture of human wellbeing. He argues that poverty is not just about lack of income but also about access to essential goods and services, such as food, healthcare, and education. Furthermore, he argues that inequality is a significant cause of poverty, as it creates barriers to access and opportunities for those already disadvantaged. One of Sen's most significant contributions to the study of poverty and inequality is the development of the capability approach. This approach emphasizes that the goal of action should be to expand people's capabilities or ability to lead lives they value. This includes income and material resources and social, political, and cultural resources that enable people to achieve their goals and aspirations.

Sen argues that the focus should be on expanding the capabilities of the most disadvantaged members of society, as they are the ones who are most likely to be trapped in poverty. He believes that development policies should create an environment enabling people to exercise their freedoms and pursue their goals. This requires economic growth and social and political changes that would allow people to participate in decision-making and influence their own lives.

Sen's work on Poverty and Inequality: Sen's work on poverty and inequality has significantly impacted development policy. His emphasis on the importance of expanding capabilities and addressing inequality has led to a shift in focus from purely economic growth to a more comprehensive approach to development. This has led to including non-economic factors, such as health, education, and gender equality, in development goals. Sen has also emphasized the importance of social protection measures, such as cash transfers and food subsidies, in addressing poverty and inequality. He argues that these measures can help to reduce the immediate impacts of poverty and improve people's access to essential goods and services. However, he also emphasizes the need for more long-term solutions that address the root causes of poverty, such as inequality and lack of opportunities.

Amartya Sen's work on poverty and inequality has influenced the development economics field. His focus on expanding capabilities, addressing inequality, and measuring poverty in a multidimensional way has led to a more comprehensive understanding of poverty and development. His work has also emphasized social protection measures and long-term solutions to poverty rather than just short-term relief measures. Sen's ideas influence development policy and practice worldwide as countries work towards a more equitable and sustainable future.

Prof. Sen's poverty measure, known as the Sen index, is a widely accepted method of measuring poverty that considers the headcount proportion of people below the poverty line and the distribution of income or consumption among this group. The index is sensitive to changes in the distribution factor in the poverty line groups, changes in the price index of wage-goods and the relative prices of wage-goods due to productivity changes in the latter. This makes it a more accurate measure of poverty than other methods that do not consider these factors. To him, improving literacy rates is essential for reducing poverty levels.

One of the critical contributions of Sen's economic ideas is his emphasis on the importance of freedom and human rights in the development process. Sen argues that development is about increasing material wealth and expanding human capabilities and independence. He believes that people should have the freedom to choose their goals and pursue their aspirations and that development should be seen as a means to this end.

Sen's ideas about the importance of freedom and human rights have influenced development policies in many countries, particularly in the context of the human development approach. This approach emphasizes the importance of expanding human capabilities, including education, healthcare, and other essential services and promoting democratic institutions, human rights, and social justice.

Modi's consistent and persistent efforts making Bharat $2 trillion export-oriented economy by 2030

$2 trillion Exports by 2030 is a major step towards becoming export-oriented economy. Once called the Golden Sparrow, India is once again on the path of regaining its space. As a result, the country has set a target of $2 trillion export by 2030. There is a famous saying in Sanskrit :

Meaning – One can accomplish any impossible-looking task not by merely making wishes or coveting about it but by consistent and persistent efforts. Furthermore, has anyone ever heard of a deer coming and entering the mouth of a lion. India is the country with the largest human resources in the world. Hence, it's perceived as an inward-looking economy that thrives from consumption by its young population. In 2014, India was the 10th largest economy in GDP size, with ~ 2.04 trillion USD (World GDP stood at 79.73 trillion USD) and with an export base of ~ 469 billion USD or 2.47 per cent of the total global trade market despite having 1.30 billion people representing ~ 17.7 per cent of the world's population. In simpler words, in 2014, ~18 per cent population of the world contributed 2.55 per cent to global GDP and world exports share of 2.47 per cent. India, in coming years, will be the largest manufacturer and eventually the exporter of drones, defence, and digital exports including semiconductors. The work has already begun A decade ago, India and its expertise were largely undermined, with the best brains leaving the country and India being perceived as a factory of low-skilled workers, who can speak English well and are only suitable for blue collared service-oriented outsourcing Jobs. This is how the world saw India from its coloured lenses. However, that was not the perception and reality in the past (a few millennia back). Bharat, since ancient times, has been an export-oriented economy. Until about 1000 AD, Bharat contributed 34 per cent of the world's total GDP without looting, plundering, or colonising any other country but by exporting superior goods to the rest of the world. Despite attacks from foreign plunderers and aggressors, until the middle of the 18th century, India contributed ~ one-fourth of the world GDP, largely again driven by exports. Evidence of India's exports and its proficiency in manufacturing can be witnessed by the fact that when the Generals of Alexander like Cassander, Ptolemy, and Seleucus reached Macedonia after Alexander's death carrying spices, muslin and silk and offered it to their wives, women friends and partners as gifts, they were astonished to see that Greek women for years have been wearing outfits made of these finest materials that were made in Bharat. Another evidence of it is India being called the Golden Sparrow. Who and why this name was given to Bharat? Britishers, when they first came to India, called India the Golden Sparrow as the quantum of gold or gold coins and gold ornaments that existed in every Indian household was incomparable to the rest of the world. This quantum of gold existed in Indian temples and Indian households despite India having no major gold mines. The predominant reason why India was called 'the golden sparrow' was because of its abundant raw materials and availability of precious stones. Mauryan huge ships sailed as far as Syria, Egypt and ancient Greece, carrying raw material, cloth, silk, muslin and spices and returned with precious stones and gold. The ancient Bharat was a global trade hub. Major cities had Dharamshalas where importers could stay free of cost, accept Bharat's hospitality and check the Indian goods and then place orders to be taken to their own countries. All these business activities vanished due to colonisation by the British. After Independence, India struggled to survive, and the question of exports was forgotten in such a dire state of existence.

But off-late, India has now realised its strength the same way how Bhagwan Hanuman realised his immense powers after Jambavan the king of bears and guru of Hanuman made him realise his true powers, changing the tale and its trajectory since 2014. From an export of ~ USD 469 billion in 2014, India's export hit a whopping 759.93 billion USD export mark in 2022. India, in its recent trade policy, has kept a stretched target of 2 trillion USD by 2030, by which time India's economy should hit the 7.5 trillion USD mark. One phrase that defines the Government of India's ambition in exports is BHAG (Big Hairy Audacious Goal). To facilitate this aspirational, ambitious and audacious goal, the Government is walking endless miles with exporters so that they could aid and be instrumental in India achieving its dream of AatmaNirbhar Bharat (Self – reliant) and SarvatraSahayak Bharat (Helping everyone around). A few important points that emerge from the GOI (Govt of India) plan include No Sunset clause – To date, the export policy always had an end period, but now the perks and benefits extended under the New Trade Policy 2023 has no any sunset clause. In other words, it will remain in force forever. Earlier, export policies came with a five-year window, which acted as a bottleneck. For the first few years, the exporter would deploy his capital, time, and resources, build connections, and get quality checks approved. By then, reaping had to start the law changes, hampering business acumen and activity. This small change has altered the exporters' dynamics perpetually and stabilises the entire ecosystem. Restructuring the Department of Commerce – The Department of Commerce has been restructured by the Government of India and made it future-ready and now acting as an enabler to exporters. A trade promotion body has been set up under the Department of Commerce, whose sole aim is to showcase the goods and services of India to the rest of the world. It is acting as a sales engine for the exporters, saving their precious time and money in chasing potential buyers Indian Brands to go global – The new trade policy is now directing India's at least 100 brands to be the champion brands in their respective areas. Recently, Banarasi Pan, Banarasi Langda Mango, Ramnagar Bhanta (Brinjal), and Adamchini Rice have received GI Geographical Indication (GI) tag ensuring that the world recognises the products and quality that come out from various regions of India. E-commerce & Digital Commerce – Foreign trade policy has been extended to E-com and D-Com (Digital commerce), which is expected to contribute roughly 15 per cent of the total 2 trillion USD exports to emanate from India in 2030. There are two kinds of exports – Services Exports and Merchandise exports (export of Goods). India wishes to excel in both of them. The target for services and merchandise has been set at 1 trillion USD each, which means focus is on manufacturing goods and services. India, in coming years, will be the largest manufacturer and eventually the exporter of drones, defence, and digital exports including semiconductors. The work has already begun, and results will start coming forth in the next couple of years. Finally, Hanuman has realised its inner strength and crossing the Hind Mahasagar is a cakewalk.

"Bapu's Legacy Extends Far Beyond India": Chief Justice DY Chandrachud

New Delhi(KCN): Chief Justice of India DY Chandrachud today said Mahatma Gandhi's ideas have persisted over time as a tool of social change, non-violent ways of life and humanism. The Chief Justice of India was speaking at a programme organised on Gandhi Jayanti in London. "In India, he is lovingly referred to as 'Bapu' which means 'father'. In a spiritual sense, he is a guiding light for all of us. His ideas have persisted over time as a tool of social change, non-violent ways of life and humanism," Chief Justice Chandrachud said.

"Bapu's legacy extends far beyond the boundaries of India. His ideas have inspired countless individuals and people's movements around the world, transcending cultural and geographical barriers. His philosophy continues to influence and guide those who strive for a more equitable and just society," Chief Justice Chandrachud said. The Chief Justice of India said Bapu's commitment to social justice and equality continues to "inspire us to fight against injustices". "His unwavering belief in the inherent dignity and worth of every individual serves as a reminder that we must strive for a society where everyone is treated with fairness and respect. BJP Lacks Cohesion

Bhubaneswar(KCN): While the Governing Biju Janata Dal (BJD) is reigning supreme in Odisha's political scenario, there should be no doubt that the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) is a possibility having all potential to become the future. The saffron party which was reduced to almost 'Zero' after breaking of the BJD-BJP alliance in 2009, has emerged from the ground zero situation and become the state's principal opposition party in a span of one decade in 2019. Therefore, the BJP has a future while the Congress boat is gradually sinking with consecutive elections. However, can the saffron party snatch away power from BJD after the 2014 elections? Beginning from Amit Shah to Dharmendra Pradhan and Manmohan Samal, all are optimistic on BJP coming to power in Odisha after next general elections for the State Assembly and the Lok Sabha elections. It may sound strange keeping in view the present mood of the saffron party in the state, lack of cohesion in the state unit of the party and absence of a powerful and charismatic leadership to lead the saffron brigade. The BJP has been lacking in these points, which are the major hurdles before the party. The BJP leadership is optimistic that its next success is apparently based on its earlier performances in 2014 and 2019 general elections. In 2014 assembly elections, the BJP's vote share in Odisha was only 18 per cent which made a long jump and touched 32 per cent in 2019 polls, a growth of 14 per cent. Similarly, the saffron party which secured 21.5 percent of votes in 2014 Lok Sabha polls, increased its vote share to 42.80 per cent, a growth of 16.81 per cent. Taking average growth, the party increased its vote share by 15 per cent in a span of five years between 2014 and 2019. In the same yardstick and if one goes by the statistics, the BJP in 2024 polls may increase its vote share to 45 per cent, more than the vote captured by the ruling BJD. However, in politics, two plus two does not always make four. It may be 4 or 44. Therefore, it may be wrong if one concludes that BJP is all set to form a government in Odisha. There are several factors which altogether create an atmosphere for a political party to win the confidence of the people and form government. Naveen Patnaik's regional party, though huge in size, has all the ingredients to form a government. There is absolutely no challenge to the leadership of Naveen Patnaik and he is the Supremo in the regional outfit and there is no second leader in BJD. People of Odisha know that stamping their votes on conch symbol is strengthening Naveen Patnaik, a leader having trust of crores of people in the state. But, when it comes to BJP, there is no such leader in the lotus party in Odisha to match Naveen's charisma. This is not all. There is also not one leader on whom the people will trust and vote for him. Hence, Odisha BJP leadership lacks charisma as Naveen has. The only face to which the people of Odisha recognize is Prime Minister Narendra Modi. It is in fact difficult for the people to decide whom to vote for if they cast their mark on the lotus symbol. In a recent event, senior BJP leader and Union Minister Dharmendra Pradhan said that the BJP will go to twin polls for Lok Sabha and Odisha Assembly next year without projecting anyone as party's chief ministerial candidate.

The party will elect its leader for the number one post after elections as it has done in some other states like Maharashtra and Haryana. At the same time, Shri Pradhan also claimed that the BJP will form government in Odisha after the 2024 twin elections. Will BJP's strategy in this regard bear fruit or the party will be frustrated as earlier? The supporters of BJP including village level party workers are confused over the state leadership. When Manmohan Samal is made the state president, he is unable to form his own team in districts.

All the district presidents have served for long time and Shri Samal had been unable to replace them, though he sincerely wants to present a new team. A state president used to implement party programs through the district presidents. If the district presidents are not up to the expectations of the State President, what can he do? How to implement programs and also strengthen booths at the village level? Things are really difficult for Shri Samal as he will be accountable for both the good and bad performance of the party in Odisha.

gratitude to the Government of India and Prime Minister Narendra Modi in a "Thanks-Giving Programme for the Women Reservation Bill 2023", she said that

Stating that assuming the role of Governor in Telangana, there were no female ministers in the cabinet, the Governor said that she administered the oath to two female ministers. Startup Odisha Yatra, Startup Xpress witness significant rise in idea generation videos on social media. ACC and Ambuja Cements collaborated with micro and nano influencers to drive engagement around the bubble barrier technology.

The two companies were the first to launch an augmented reality-based game in India, which created an immersive experience for users by illustrating the state of marine plastic pollution and the basic functioning of the Bubble Barrier technology. This game convinces the user to play their role in driving change by encouraging players to “bubble pop” their way to cleaner oceans and safer habitats for marine organisms.

Mr. Neeraj Akhoury, CEO India Holcim and Managing Director & CEO of Ambuja Cements Ltd., said that the award served yet another reminder of the company’s efforts towards sustainability. “We are elated and honoured that a campaign that’s important to us has received the recognition that it deserved. Sustainability and business go hand in hand at Ambuja Cements and ACC Ltd. This will encourage us to further step up our efforts in this direction.”

How World Cups bring the best out of captains

NewDelhi:The muggy April night was dark, but Wankhede Stadium shone bright with lights beaming down from its giant towers. Forty-two thousand spectators had just been silenced as Virat Kohli drilled a return catch to Tillakaratne Dilshan, leaving India at 121 for 3. A target of 275 seemed far away. And down the pavilion steps came MS Dhoni. A collective buzz went around; the captain was not in form, but was still promoting himself above Yuvraj Singh who was. But Dhoni was not being impulsive or merely bold and innovative. He knew he had to tackle and neutralize Muralitharan before Yuvraj came to bat. Paddy Upton, the mental-conditioning expert with the Indian team, whispered to Kirsten, 'Dhoni will win the game for us.' In his book, The Barefoot Coach, Upton explains Dhoni to us, 'It is not emotional control but the lack of access to emotions... a performance enhancing gift from birth.' MSD began slowly, 2 off 10 balls, 13 off 24. And then he thumped Murali to cover off his back foot for a boundary. The rest is history. As Dhoni hit Kulasekara into the stands at long on, the crowd went berserk. The captain merely twirled his bat and picked his souvenir stump. Later as his teammates, danced, jumped and wept, Dhoni was by comparison, sphinx-like. Courage, brilliance, nerves of steel, but most important, a tranquil mind that realized long ago that triumph and disaster are mere imposters. Perhaps the template for heroics by World Cup captains was set at the first-ever World Cup final in 1975. With West Indies tottering at 50 for 3, out came bespectacled Lloyd, in his characteristic stooping gait, with a bat that looked like a match stick in his hand. What followed was carnage as Lloyd tore into the Aussies. While white-haired, 40-year-old Kanhai, unrecognizable from the pomp of his youth, gave him sedate company, Lloyd pummeled 12 fours, 2 sixes and hit a century of 85 balls. The bowlers he belted were Lillee, Thomson, Gilmour and Walker. Remember, there were no field restrictions in those days. Chasing 292, Australia panicked their way to four run outs and a defeat that was bigger than the 17-run margin. West Indies in 1975 had not become the unstoppable juggernaut; they were just starting to rebuild after the Sobers era. Richards and Greenidge were new, as was Roberts. Holding, Marshall and Garner had not arrived. Lloyd made all this irrelevant that June evening. Face almost inscrutable, Clive Lloyd lifted the first ever cricket World Cup trophy. The most vivid Indian cricket photograph is of course that of Kapil Dev lifting the Prudential Cup in June 1983. The team went as no-hopers, the odds deservedly 66 to 1 on India. Srikanth, the irrepressible story-teller, says he asked his wife to join him on the World Cup tour so that they could 'watch the final' and proceed to USA on holiday. Kapil torpedoed all that. Every cricketer in that 1983 team will swear that Kapil's 175 not out to pull India from 17 for 5 against Zimbabwe, is the greatest one-day innings by an Indian.

Defending just 183 in the final, it was Kapil's catch - running miles backwards to finish Richards - that opened the floodgates. Kapil's tactical nous was also fully tuned on through the tournament. The much higher use of Mohinder Amarnath in conditions that favored his gentle swing; preferring Kirti Azad to Shastri at the latter end of the tournament; and harnessing Balwinder, Binny and Madan Lal with himself for a canny bowling combination. But perhaps the first seeds were sown a few months earlier in Berbice, Guyana when India beat West Indies in the second ODI of their bilateral series. It was further reinforced in the first game of the 1983 World Cup, when they beat the Windies on the back of Yashpal Sharma's heroics. People forget that India beat the mighty Windies thrice in four months. Kapil, the inspirational captain, his 1,000-Watt toothy grin has never been matched by any winning captain. Australia went through their lowest period in the mid-eighties. Chappell, Marsh, Lillee, Thomson, they had all gone. Hughes had thrown in the towel, finding the burden of leading unbearable and Allan Border inherited a down-in-the-dumps team. But it was the perfect job for the most obdurate left-hander in cricket history. No one else could have snarled and berated, coaxed and shown teammates by personal example, what the baggy green cap meant. With Bob Simpson as coach, Border formed a partnership that reshaped Australian cricket history. The first step in the turnaround was that tied Test match in Chennai, exactly a year before WC 1987. A tie that felt like a loss to Indian cricketers and like a win for the Aussies. It was the game that lit their flame again. So connect this to their triumph in the lengthening shadows at Eden Gardens in November 1987. With England cruising at 135 for 2, just 119 to get, Border brought himself on. Branded forever in public memory is the visual of Gattling caught reverse-sweeping the part-time left-arm spinner. Border gambled and won. Finals usually claim all the attention but people also remember that Border won tough matches on the way, never afraid to throw his young teammates into the most challenging situations. Be it the one run win over India in their first game or the semifinal against Imran Khan's Pakistan at their citadel in Lahore. The World Cup seems to bring out the best from the captains. Not only do they raise their game but their strategic and tactical acumen acquires an inspirational edge, often giving them match-winning breakthroughs.

India land in Thiruvananthapuram sans Kohli

NewDelhi:The Indian team has arrived in Thiruvananthapuram, but without Virat Kohli. The star Indian batsman requested permission from the team management due to a personal emergency. He flew to Mumbai from Guwahati and is expected to join the Indian team in Thiruvananthapuram on Monday. "A source from the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) confirmed that he went to Mumbai for personal reasons. "Virat will rejoin the team soon," the source said something a spokesman for the team also confirmed. The other members of the contingent arrived in the Kerala city after a four-hour flight on a special aircraft on Sunday evening. As the Indian team reached Thiruvananthapuram for the second and final warm-up game against the Netherlands on Tuesday, wet weather seemed to be following them from the extreme east down to the south. Their first warm-up game against England was cancelled due to rain without a single ball bowled. It may not come as a surprise if the second game too meets a similar fate. There is a chance that Tuesday's match could also be affected by inclement weather, either fully or partially. The weather was not favorable on Sunday, with the city experiencing intermittent rain. The team has scheduled a practice session for Monday, but it is subject to weather conditions. "Team India will have an optional training session from 2 PM onwards at the KCA - St Xavier's College Cricket Ground, Thiruvananthapuram, weather permitting," said the team's spokesman.

So far, three games have been affected by rain, with two of them taking place in Thiruvananthapuram, between South Africa and Afghanistan on September 29. The Australia-Netherlands match on September 30 was reduced to a 23-over contest but couldn't be completed. New Zealand and South Africa are scheduled to play on Monday before India takes on the Netherlands on Tuesday. India start their World Cup campaign against Australia in Chennai on October 8. The championship kicks off on October 5 between last World Cup finalists, England and New Zealand, in Ahmedabad.

Shadab Khan optimistic of reviving form at the World Cup

NewDelhi:Pakistan all-rounder Shadab Khan acknowledged his recent dip in bowling form but was quick to point out that there was no shortage of skills to turn it around. The Pakistan vice-captain has picked 13 wickets in 11 ODIs. "I do understand that my recent form is not good, but I have the skills," Shadab said in a press conference in Hyderabad. "Just that when you are not performing, you are mentally a bit down, but skill-wise, there is no issue. From the mental aspect, things have changed after I got the rest, and hopefully, we will give a good performance in the upcoming World Cup." Four of those 13 wickets picked this year came in the fixture against Nepal in the Asia Cup. However, he was otherwise lacklustre in that tournament. "From a cricketing point of view, the Asia Cup didn't go well, but that's the beauty of cricket: you learn from your mistakes, and there is always an opportunity to learn and play good cricket," Shadab said. "After we lost the Asia Cup, we got a good rest, and I believe it's no more a skill game but a mental game, and it's the World Cup. You can make good decisions when you are relaxed mentally," he added. While being optimistic about his own revival, Shadab also threw his weight behind Fakhar Zaman, who too has struggled for runs and didn't get to bat in the opening warm-up fixture against New Zealand in Hyderabad on October 29. "He is a big player for us, an impactful player, and whenever he performs, the team wins. His three centuries this year have come in winning causes and every team wants this kind of players to play for their side. We have no doubt about his ability, and we back him as he is a world-class player," Shadab said. Pakistan begin with their first two matches in Hyderabad, while their next seven league stage fixtures are spread out to four other venues in Bengaluru, Kolkata, Chennai and Ahmedabad. Shadab reckoned the key for his team, and perhaps most of the other title aspirants, will be to quickly adapt to different conditions and across the country as well as keep a keen eye on fitness levels.

Pakistan have already lost one of the best bowling assets in Naseem Shah to a shoulder injury. "Conditions will change as we will be playing in different venues, and we have to adapt to conditions very quickly, fitness-wise as it's a long tournament and the Asia Cup saw some fast bowlers getting injured. So fitness will be a concern for all teams but hopefully not for us as we lost one of the key players and we don't want any other fitness issues," Shadab said. Two days after New Zealand comfortably chased down Pakistan's 345/5 in just 44th over in the warm-up game, Shadab felt winning the showpiece event will come down to which team bowls the best. "This is my feeling: the team that bowls well will win the World Cup. Given the conditions, it will be difficult to contain the batters and pick wickets, given the nature of flat tracks and small boundaries. So I feel the team that bowls well will win the tournament, and we have world-class bowlers, and as a bowling unit, if we perform well we will become champions," he said.
